Walt Simonson to write 'Avengers'

By Maggie Thompson

"I'm going to be writing The Avengers," Walter Simonson told CBG in a phone interview, "plotting and scripting as of #290. John Buscema and Tom Palmer will be the art team.

"The current writer, Roger Stern, was so far ahead that, whereas #283 is out now, my first issue won't come until #290."

He said there had been no formal announcement yet but that he'd heard from friends on the West Coast already about his new assignment.

"I was offered the book three weeks ago and I had to stop and think about it, because I really wasn't sure whether I could do a team book and I wasn't sure what I would do with The Avengers.

"I'm working some ideas out now. Editor Mark Gruenwald has some ideas for directions, as well. The book is coming up on its 300th issue, and I'd like to do something that will be a slambang 300th, as well.

"I'm working on story lines now that I'm hoping will build into a double-issue #300. If my current plan works, I would think we'd have a double-issue #296 and a double-issue #300."

He said the team's line-up would change in the next six months. "That will let me work through current story lines and make some changes gradually, so it won't appear as though this is the hand of the author forcing characters to do things they're not ready to do."

He said he wanted to keep the new line-up a secret at this point.

Marvel to seek talent at summer conventions

By Maggie Thompson

At the three major industry conventions this summer — in Chicago, Atlanta, and San Diego — Marvel Comics will provide editorial staff to appraise and encourage the potential of new talent.

Marvel Editor-in-Chief Tom DeFalco told CBG in a phone interview, "To remind the comics world that Marvel has an ongoing progam to search out new talent, our editorial staff will be setting aside time at the

Marvel to give Kirby 2100 pages of his art

By Don and Maggie Thompson

"Judging from work distributed to inkers so far," comic-book artist and Kirby chronologist Richard Howell told CBG in a phone interview, "Jack Kirby will shortly receive his share of art from Fantastic Four #7-12, 14, 16, 17, 20-24, 27, 30, 32-34, 36, 38, and 41-43, plus the art from the second and third FF annuals.

"As I understand it, there are quantities of important Kirby work from Thor, Hulk, and Captain America that are included in the return of between 1800 and 2100 pages of Jack's Marvel art."

"It isn't what we had hoped for, but at least there'll be something to leave the grand-kids, something to show around and to display," Roz Kirby said.

The Kirbys have been trying to get back from Marvel what remains of his share of what might be more than 10,000 pages of art Kirby produced both alone and with other artists for the company, including early issues of Fantastic Four, The Incredible Hulk, Thor, and X-Men.

"What we are getting are odds and ends," Roz Kirby said. "There are very few covers in the list they sent of what they have for us. The rest of it is lost or stolen."

Kirby, an artist as fast as he was popular, turned out around 80 pages a month for Marvel, plus covers for nearly the entire line. He has been trying for years to get that artwork back but had refused, until recently, to sign the release-of-rights papers Marvel insisted on having before the art would be returned.

"He didn't want to sign, he wanted to go on fighting," his wife said. "It was at my request that he signed. It was becoming too much of a strain on my health to keep on with this."

The Kirbys do not yet have physical possession of the art.

"They say it is all packed and ready to go," she said. "Our lawyers are waiting for a full list of what is being sent so we can have it insured.

"After all this time, we don't want to take a chance on having it lost in the mail."

Compared to the vast page-count of original art produced in the comics industry in the Golden Age, little survives today. In some unusual cases, files of original artwork were stored and turn up from time to time; the bulk was destroyed.

Despite almost industry-wide practices from the '40s on, a few comic-book companies did not automatically discard original art for their comics. The most notable exception was EC, as publisher William Gaines carefully stored the original art used on that line's publications.

A Marvel spokesperson told CBG, "What is surprising is that this much work survived, when other companies often routinely shredded original art. That Marvel didn't do the same might even have been a matter of inertia. It was certainly not stored for easy inventory. In fact, Marvel's preliminary inventories have proven to be wildly inaccurate, as it developed that labels on storage envelopes often bore little resemblance to their contents."

One collector told CBG, "As an art collector, I find the quantity of surviving work surprising. I've been trying to find pages by [DC artists] Wayne Boring and Jim Mooney, for example, and have come up with very little. So many artists working for so many companies didn't get back even a quarter of the material they created."

Richard Howell was asked to describe what sorts of things have happened to lost original art over the years:

- "Originals had no market

- "Some was given out to potential licensors, as favors for staffer's friends or relatives, or as unofficial payment for jobs for which there was no money available."
- "Security in early days was reflective of the low values placed on the originals. As a result, some art was simply lost or removed unofficially."
- "In a few cases, artists asked for return of stories, and simply were given the art on the spot."

"It is true," said Editor-in-Chief Tom DeFalco, "that the Kirbys do not have the artwork in their possession, but that is because we don't have their release as of June 12. Upon receipt of that release, we will happily send the pages to them. This has been going on much too long."

Marvel spokespeople said Kirby's attorney had notified them that the release was in the mail, so they expect it momentarily.

"We're actually returning more than 2100 pages of artwork," DeFalco told CBG, "including his share of Avengers #1-3, #5-8, and #10, pages from Fantastic Four #3 and #5, and pages from Journey into Mystery #55 and #58-61."

He said that Kirby's share of more than 60 issues of "Thor" stories were among the items being returned.

Chicago, Atlanta, and San Diego conventions to review portfolios and look at samples. We are hoping to find some bright new superstars."

He said the first convention he attended in his post as editor-in-chief was Oakland in May. "A gentleman showed me his samples there, and they were so good I was able to hire him on the spot."

DeFalco said the artist's first work for Marvel came into the office June 9. "I reviewed his first professional work for us. He showed tremendous talent and somewhere along the line I suspect he'll be given a regular book.

"I prefer not to mention his name in print at this time, because I don't want to put a lot of pressure on him, but I hope this same thing happens at other conventions this year."

Asked what would-be Marvel artists should bring to show Marvel editors, DeFalco suggested:

From artists: "I'd like to see comic-book samples, two or three pages of people in movement; the work should include backgrounds." He said the Marvel Try-Out Book is "wonderfully helpful, especially for inkers. I know what the plot is and what the story should look like. I can look at it immediately and spot the strengths."

He said, "Many times, people come to conventions and show us paintings of flowers or that sort of thing as artistic samples. That's no help."

From writers: "In terms of writers, we rarely read a plot there; it's too hectic at a convention. Writers should submit one-page synopses, double-spaced. I want to know the situation, the conflict, how it's brought to a climax, and how the climax is resolved.

"A pro can do it in two or three sentences."

Special Marvel guests will be Stan Lee, Moebius, and Sergio Aragones.

Introduction: Fish Police Special

By Steve Moncuse

The Fish Police.

The Fish Police Special.

"Special." It's that one little word that gave me so much trouble.

About this time last year, Diana Schutz asked me if I would be interested in doing a Fish Police story for Comico. Maybe I draw talking fish for a living, but I'm not nearly as silly as you, or my parents, might believe. I said I'd love to.

My regular book keeps me fairly busy, so I figured I'd just pound out another clever little FP story. (A little mystery, a little action, a lot of beer, and — voila! Fish Police!) Take the money. And run. It would be called The Fish Police One-Shot, or maybe The Color Fish Police — something along those lines. It would look real nice sitting next to all those other books in the real comics section. And everyone would be happy.

But, geez, they went and called it The Fish Police Special!

Maybe I'm just old-fashioned, but it seems to me if they're gonna call it special, then I ought to make it special.

So I did.

When talking about their favorite comics, most readers ask, "What happens next?" Mine ask, "What happened first?" For those of you reading a Fish Police story for the first time, this is an excellent place to start. The Special actually takes place before Fish Police #1. What follow are the first pages of a 40-page story, available from Comico in July.

What happened first?

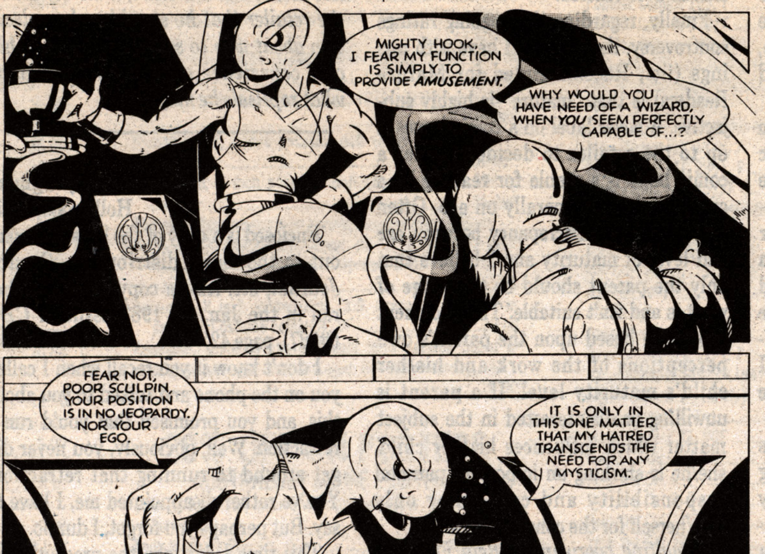
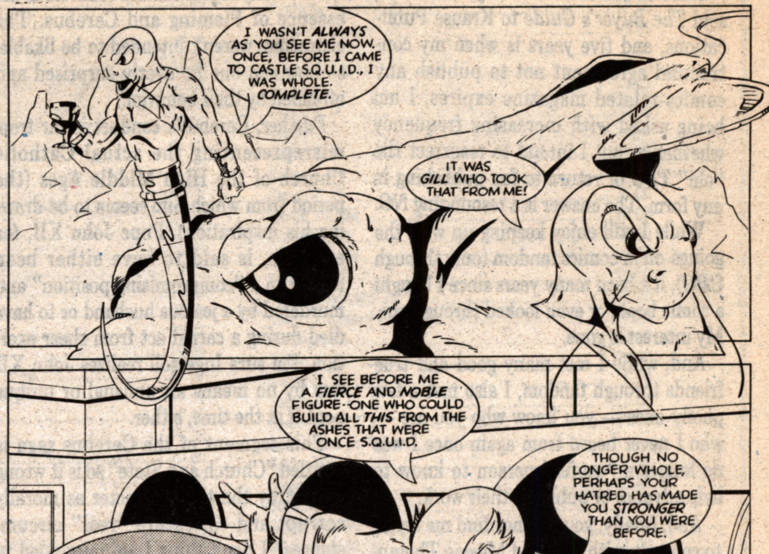
I USE A MUCH MORE POWERFUL TOOL THAN YOUR MISTS.
I USE MY MIND.



MIGHTY HOOK, I FEAR MY FUNCTION IS SIMPLY TO PROVIDE AMUSEMENT.
WHY WOULD YOU HAVE NEED OF A WIZARD, WHEN YOU SEEM PERFECTLY CAPABLE OF...?
FEAR NOT, POOR SCULPIN, YOUR POSITION IS IN NO JEOPARDY. NOR YOUR EGO.
IT IS ONLY IN THIS ONE MATTER THAT MY HATRED TRANSCENDS THE NEED FOR ANY MYSTICISM.
MAY I ASK THE SOURCE OF SUCH A POTENT HATRED?



I WASN'T ALWAYS AS YOU SEE ME NOW. ONCE, BEFORE I CAME TO CASTLE S.Q.U.I.D., I WAS WHOLE. COMPLETE.
IT WAS GILL WHO TOOK THAT FROM ME!
I SEE BEFORE ME A FIERCE AND NOBLE FIGURE--ONE WHO COULD BUILD ALL THIS FROM THE ASHES THAT WERE ONCE S.Q.U.I.D.
THOUGH NO LONGER WHOLE, PERHAPS YOUR HATRED HAS MADE YOU STRONGER THAN YOU WERE BEFORE.
NO, MY WIZARD, YOU COULD NOT UNDERSTAND.
THEN TELL ME, MASTER. IN ORDER TO SERVE YOU COMPLETELY, I MUST KNOW ALL ABOUT YOU.

(Fish Police continues on Page 6)

Discussion of the "dilemma" is still in its early stages. We've tried to bring you views of publishers and distributors, and two things seem clear at this point:

- At present there is no smoothly running process for ordering back issues of comics which are still in print from the publishers.
- Back isses should not be called "out of print" when they are only "out of stock."

Whether it is a retailer or a distributor who is doing it as the "simplest" way of describing problems in getting back stock, calling in-print comics "out of print" is misleading, confusing, and just plain wrong.

When the June-solicited new comics from Capital City totalled 385 and the cost of buying one copy of each of them totalled $640.95, it becomes clear why retailer and distributor alike devote most time to the new comics which have to be speedily processed and put out for immediate sales.

At the same time, the back-stock market is more confusing, ephemeral, and difficult to deal with; it shouldn't have the added complication of mislabeled products.

This issue of CBG brings you the first installment of our list of comics items that publishers tell us are in print. We welcome further contributions to the list — from all publishers. And we ask for prompt deletions from the list as items go out of print.

With this as an aid, maybe — just maybe — we can see lots of great material go out of print speedily.

(Who ever thought that would be something to aim for?)

Since it will soon be five years since I sold The Buyer's Guide to Krause Publications, and five years is when my contractual agreement not to publish any comics-related magazine expires, I am being asked with increasing frequency whether or not I intend to resurrect the "old" TBG or return to fan publishing in any form. The answer is a resounding NO.

While I still enjoy keeping up with the goings-on in comics fandom (only through CBG), it's been many years since I bought a comic book, or even looked through one. My interest is gone.

And, while I met many good and true friends through fandom, I also met a few phony ones — you know who you are — who I never heard from again once I was no longer a "useful" person to know to help advance or publicize their work.

And, finally, you will not find me trying to compete with Don and Maggie Thompson because I think they are doing an absolutely wonderful job with CBG.

Robert Ingersoll need not vacillate on the issue of whether Cerebus did, in fact, rape Astoria. I can perceive no ambiguity in the situation whatsoever. As to his marked distaste with the incident (an understatement), why is this an issue? I am reminded of a CBG reader who was repulsed by Reid Fleming's personality and actions. Don said it then and I'll say it now: Utterly reprehensible behavior is the essence of Fleming and Cerebus. The characters weren't intended to be likable, so how can one be overly surprised and offended by their behavior?

Further, Cerebus's conduct is far from misrepresenting the actual Catholic Church of the High Middle Ages (the period from which Sim seems to be drawing his inspiration). Pope John XII, for example, is said to have either been caught in a "compromising position" and murdered by a jealous husband or to have died during a carnal act from sheer exertion. I'm sure Ingersoll realizes John XII was by no means an unusual or unique pontiff at the time, either.

This segment of the Cerebus saga is entitled "Church and State" so is it wrong to portray the title character as morally corrupt and caricature "real" circumstances? I don't thing I am misguided in assuming that the average Cerebus reader is at least in his/her late teens (16 up) and is capable of recognizing the outright evil nature of rape without having it spelled out for him/her.

As to whether there will be "negative repercussions" for Cerebus as a result of his act, I must question the necessity of such retribution. (I'm sure that line will be misconstrued.) Comics would not be reflecting real life if every criminal act (even one as heinous as this) was punished accordingly. Even John XII remained corrupt to his dying day and not everyone would argue that even his ultimate demise was adequate punishment for his crimes.

I realize that Ingersoll's response to Cerebus #94 was probably a "gut-reaction" and I know his criticism of the story was well-intentioned, but I believe equally that he over-reacted.

Finally, regarding the ongoing ratings controversy, the problem I have with ratings (i.e., Recommended for Mature Readers) is that "mature" is highly subjective. A cover label on a comic leaves it up to the retailer to decide whether a comic book is suitable for reading by a customer based generally on age. Often there is a great discrepancy between age and level of maturity and I believe that only the parent should be the judge of what is and isn't suitable. This judgment should be based upon the parent's own perceptions of the work and his/her child's maturity level. If a parent is unwilling or disinterested in the subject matter which influences his/her child, she/he is shirking an important parental responsibility and can blame only him/herself for the consequences.

[Equating boorishness (Reid Fleming) with rape (Cerebus) is not a balanced equation. It's the difference between spilling a drink in someone's lap and gouging his face with a broken gin bottle.

There were many corrupt popes (Lucrezia and Cesare Borgia, two of history's more celebrated villains) were the children of a pope whose alleged crimes included incest, according to some accounts. However, the fact that one person has committed crimes in no way justifies the commission of crimes by another.

Your comments on labeling are entirely correct. However, what retailers are asking is that they be alerted to the fact that a judgment is called for. A retailer may choose to sell Elektra: Assassin to toddlers, but he has the to know that he might get in trouble if he does. A "Mature Readers" advisory does not decide who is mature; it merely alerts the retailer that he should make a decision about who to sell it to, based on his own conscience and his knowledge of what reprisals he may face.]

Joshua Quagmire
Hollywood, Calif.

Enclosed is a copy of the letter I've sent out to the major distributors, Comics Journal, etc. Also a copy of the ad that ran in the Jan. 16, 1987, issue of CBG (#687), page 42.

I don't know if you recall when I called you on the phone and talked to you about this, and you promised that you'd run a retraction. Well, obviously, you never did get around to running that retraction. You've rather disappointed me, I have to say. But perhaps you forgot, I dunno.

This time I did take the precaution of writing directly to Krause Legal Department, and filing a formal protest against Schanes-Blackthorne, and his false advertising.

I did not mention anything about the phone call. I also made it quite clear that neither you nor Maggie or anyone else at CBG was responsible for this ad. There's no way you could have known. And, despite your lack of doing anything, I didn't want to cause problems for you.

This time around, though, I would appreciate it if you print the notice.

I'm not the only person who this has happened to, and comics readers have a right to be notified when they're being lied to. That's your job as a news service, and I'm not asking anything exceptional for you to print this as a news item and correct your ad.

If you bothered to look at the comic book when it came out, it's obvious that none of the artwork in his comic was done by myself!

[Before we get to the letter in question, a word about retractions. We really do try to run corrections and retractions, and we strive to make them as prominent as the error. That is, if we make a mistake on Page 1, we run the correction on Page 1.

However, when you call us, the chances are you will call us at a point when we are doing something. Quite possibly, we will not be at our desks, but somewhere else in the building. It is best, if your news or correction is important, to put it in writing. We do forget some phone messages, especially when they come when we are in production approving make-up of pages or elsewhere in the building and unable to make a note.

However, in your instance, since it involved a complaint against a specific person, Don asked you specifically to put it in writing. Had you done so, we would have run the item long since. Here it is now:]

Dear Sirs:

Recently, Blackthorne Comics advertised, solicited, and sold issue #5 of Laffin' Gas (the "Bore-Us" the Bear issue) giving both myself and Cutey Bunny (my most popular character) second billing as featured cartoonist and character. This was done without either my knowledge or

Dealer Inquiries Invited

Since first seeing these ads, I've spoken to Steve Schanes twice over the phone. Both times he assured me that this was all some sort of "mistake." According to him, it was a mix-up by some of his assistants and that they had been planning on asking me to draw Cutey Bunny into the background of someone else's story, but somehow never quite got around to finding out if I'd actually be interested.

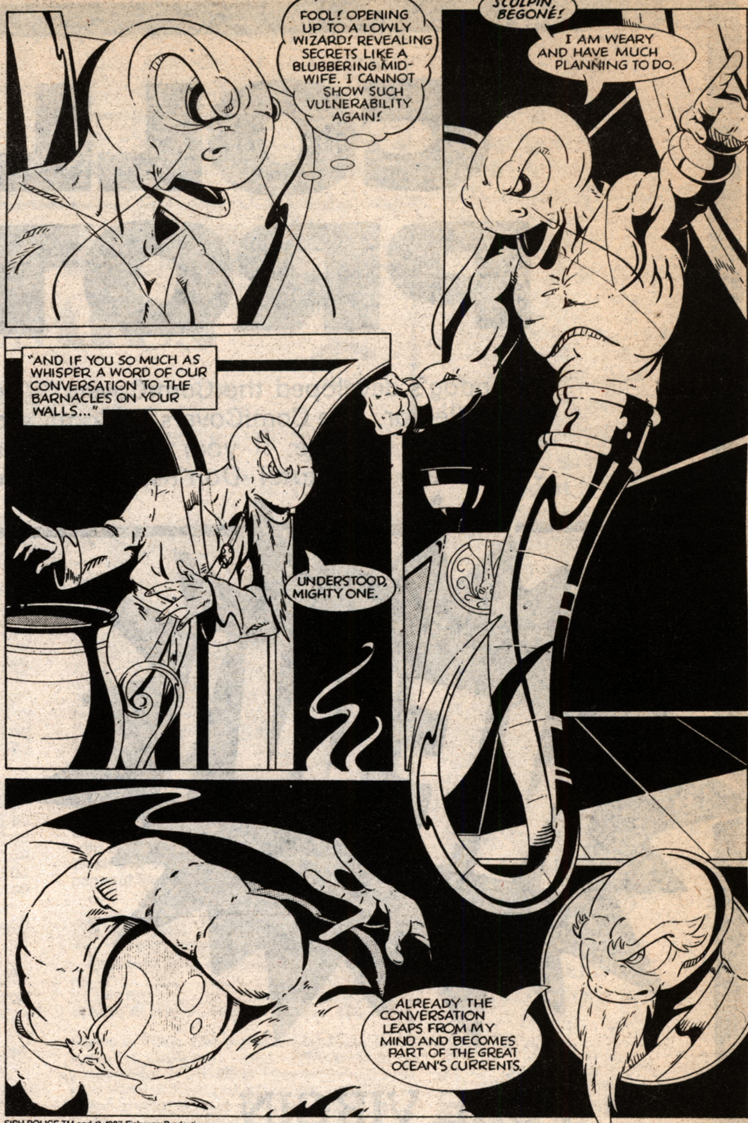
Both times I made it clear to Schanes that I had absolutely no interest in seeing Cutey Bunny or any of my other characters appear in this or any other issue of Laffin' Gas and that use of my and Cutey Bunny's names in any ads or solicitations must cease immediately. I also took the precaution of notifying him in writing, so that there could be no confusion as to my intentions and dissatisfaction.

Schanes and his assistant, John Stephenson, in turn assured me that they would send a retraction to the publications which ran these ads. Also that they would print a retraction in the actual comic itself.

Instead, when the comic hit the stands I find that this was not the actual fact of the matter. They had hired someone else to draw my characters into several panels in the story (both Cutey Bunny and Ashtoreth the Fox). Ipso facto, anybody who purchased this comic, whether wholesaler, retailer, or reader, thinking that they would be getting a Cutey Bunny story as drawn by myself, has been misled. I am just as much a victim as anyone who mistakenly ordered or bought this comic thinking that they were getting something they weren't.

I did my best to clear up the deceptive advertising and solicitation, but made the mistake myself of accepting the explanation from Schanes that it was all an accident. Even as unlikely as that sounded at the time. Had I known he was intending on hiring someone to also draw my characters into the story, I would have taken a lot stronger measures a lot sooner!

I regret any inconvenience or disappointment this may have caused you, the wholesaler, retailers, and readers. But this tepid little piece of petty flim flam was none of my doing.



FOOL! OPENING UP TO A LOWLY WIZARD! REVEALING SECRETS LIKE A BLUBBERING MID-WIFE. I CANNOT SHOW SUCH VULNERABILITY AGAIN!

In the introduction to the CBG Comics Price Guide I was surprised to read, "Regional difference continues, with a comment from Tucson that Eastern shops should drive a van to the Southwest, clean out the shops, and double their money at home."

What an odd thing to say. As the owner of two of the three shops actively dealing with collectors in Tucson, this left-handed compliment seems very peculiar to me. It's not often that you hear fans complaining of reasonable prices.

I do not really expect dealers from all over to visit us — our prices are not that low — but the remark seems to be the mouthing of some disgruntled investor or speculator. My first reaction was to lash out at such a condescending attitude, which implies that we're hicks-from-the-sticks out here. I realize that in these days of Reagan and Rambo, the fact that we don't rape our customers is apparently enough to make some people doubt our competence or "knowledge of the market."

Since you state that you will be including similar remarks from contributors in future editions of your price guide, please do all fandom a favor and try to avoid such obvious hyperbole. I personally expect to be teased by my employees and customers for weeks over that one slightly moronic sentence in your introduction.

[It should be noted first that this letter was in response to a 1986 price guide; we're cleaning out the files and felt Struck deserved a response, even at this late date.

We never saw the comment from Tucson as any sort of negative commentary on that area as a comics marketplace. How a remark that obviously implies that area retailers are keeping prices low can be interpreted as a slam at that area is, frankly, beyond us.

And, when prices vary widely in different parts of America, that is precisely the sort of information our readers want to see.]

Do you know how much T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents #1 is worth?

The #1 I'm speaking of is not the Agents that came from Tower Comics. It's not Wally Wood's T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents from Deluxe Comics. It's not the Hall of Fame from JC Comics or the two-issue Agents, also from JC.

The Agents #1 that I have is a magazine-size #1.

This was a one-shot from JC Comics as a flagship to its short-lived series. Actually, the title to this is JCP Features (at least that's what it says on the indicia). I've looked all over, including checking all the price guides and other sources as well. I've yet to find any listing of it anywhere. So I'm asking you for help.

This is a magazine-sized black-and-white one-shot. It features a cover date of February 1982 and a cover price of $2. The cover is by Mark Texeira (of Hex fame). The indicia labels it as JCP Features Vol. 1, #1, December 1981, published quarterly. But a second issue of this never appeared to my knowledge.

This features new art by Lou Manna, Mark Texeira, and Pat Gabriele, scripts by Chris Adames, Lou Manna, Kevin Duane, Pat Gabriele and Richard Lynn. It is edited by Chris Adames, Pasquele Gabriele, and Pat Gabriele. It also has two reprint features: first, The Fly's first two-page appearance from The Double Life of Pvt. Strong #1, June 1959, by Joe Simon and Jack Kirby; second, a Black Hood story ("Life's Not Like A Comic Book") by Gary Morrow, Neal Adams, and Dick Giordano. The front inside cover is an editorial to the readers by John Carbonaro. The back inside cover is the last page of the Black Hood story. The back cover is an ad for the Elfquest Gatherum. I think that this only had a print run of 18,000. I hope that you can help me locate a price for this.

[We list JCP Features #1 in our Price Guide at $5 for a near-mint copy. Bob Overstreet didn't list it last year, but it's listed in The Official Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide #17 as being worth $1 in mint condition. It's obviously not a high-demand item.]

I was very sad to read in CBG #692 of the death of E. Nelson Bridwell. Years ago, when I began a serious interest in comic books, I read a story in one of DC's Super Spectacular reprint issues that I wondered about. It featured a story about

Hawkman, but Hawkman was drawn in the story wearing a yellow hood instead of the Hawk-helmet mask I had always seen him wear in both Golden-Age reprints and Silver-Age stories.

I wrote a letter to the letter column of the comic, which Bridwell was in charge of at that time. I asked about the yellow hood and asked if it was a costume change or if there was another version of Hawkman that fell in somewhere between the Golden-Age character and the Thanagarian Hawk.

A few weeks later I got a handwritten postcard from Bridwell himself explaining the different masks the Golden-Age Hawkman had worn. Since it was my first "contact" with a comics professional (this was years before I attended my first comics con), I was elated.

I couldn't believe that a comic-book editor would actually take the time to write me a personal, detailed explanation.

I still have his postcard and I've always cherished it. I showed it to all my friends and bragged about it. It also spurred me to buy more DC comics, and, in fact, that little postcard sold me more on DC's comics than any promotion the company ever ran.

While others may remember Bridwell as the man who created The Inferior Five and The Secret Six, I will always remember him as a man who was nice to me when I was a little kid.

In these days when many comic book companies treat their fans as a "necessary evil," I will always remember a man who took the time to answer a somewhat silly but sincere question without being condescending.

I appreciate the tribute you ran to his work.

Despite Don's obvious dislike of Aircel's various titles, he has to give them brownie points for a least being on time with their comic books, unlike some other publishers. For example, one might ask whatever happened to:

- Alpha Track & Skellon Empire (#2 and up) — Fantasy General
- Armor & Silver Streak (#2 and up) and Megalith (#3 and up) — Continuity
- Captain Paragon (#5 and up) — Americomics
- Code Name: Danger (#5 and up), The Futurians (#4 and up), and The Honeymooners (#2 and up) — Lodestone
- Doomsday Squad (#6 and 7) — Fantagraphics
- Greylore (#6) — New Sirius/Campiti & Associtates:
- Manimal (#2 and up) and Murder (#3 and up) — Renegade
- Wally Wood's THUNDER Agents (#5 and up) — Deluxe

All of the above have a couple of things in common: They are still in business and they show a disdain for comic fans. Some of the titles may have run into production problems — or may even have been canceled. Fine. But the publishers need only pick up the phone or drop a line to such fan publications as CBG and explain the situation to the buyers.

You once responded to one of my letters in which I made a similar complaint about Archie's adventure line by saying that some publishers do not like to admit or acknowledge their failures. Maybe so, but the next time I see one of their new titles on the racks I will be more inclined to pass it by, rather than risk having it suddenly terminated without explanation.

As a tabloid purporting to be a guide for the buyers of comics, do you simply wait for the information to come to you or do you ever seek out details and explanations from publishers regarding late or canceled titles? The answer to this question will determine whether or not I renew my subscription.

On to more important things: With the black-and-white "industry" folding in on itself like an evening tulip, and some of the smaller four-color publishers in obvious trouble, one can only hope that the good titles somehow survive the apparent reticence of the distributors to continue to take risks.

Wouldn't it be nice if an established company, such as Archie, with its widespread distribution system and excellent production values and facilities, arranged to rescue the following titles, complete with their artists and writers: Dragonfly, Faze Four Fazers, Ex-Mutants, Concrete, Boris the Bear, Streetfighter, Captain Confederacy, To Be Announced, Trollords — just to name a few?

Finally, is Swamp Thing about to be canceled? I have noticed in the past that

Bruce Jones Anthologies Replace Terror, Encounters

Popular Eclipse Titles Conclude This Summer

Fans of Eclipse's horror and science fiction anthology titles will witness a changing of the guard as summer draws to a close this year: Tales of Terror and Alien Encounters will end their successful runs to be replaced by Bruce Jones' Twisted Tales and Alien Worlds.

"When Bruce left comics after the collapse of Pacific, Eclipse picked up the remaining issues of his popular anthology books," recalls Eclipse editor-in-chief Cat Yronwode. "Then we created our own books to fill that gap in the marketplace. Now that Bruce is back, we're happy to have Twisted Tales and Alien Worlds back as well."

"They're really different animals," says Fred Burke, comparing the Eclipse and Bruce Jones titles. "I wrote and edited for Alien Encounters and Tales of Terror. The stuff was often rougher, more explicit. We also tried to make room for new talent, for different styles. Bruce's short stories are more sophisticated, more psychological in scope—and it just so happens that's what the fans are really screaming for."

Tales of Terror #13 closes out that series in July with contributions by Chuck Dixon, Karl Waller, Kim DeMulder, Tim Truman, Ron Wagner, Fred Burke, Graham Nolan, Ron Fortier, Glen Johnson, and Jim Sinclair. Alien Encounters #14 follows in August and features the work of John Bolton, Jack Butterworth, John Ridgeway, Chuck Dixon, Tom Wimbish, Beppe Sabatini, Graham Nolan, Eric Dinehart, Tom Lyle, and Romeo Tanghal.

Jones' new books will appear bi-annually in the 48 page, squarebound, Baxter format popularized by The Dark Knight. "Of course, fan reaction and Bruce's workload will determine whether we change the frequency or format of the books," says Yronwode.

A Dave Stevens cover kicks off Twisted Tales #1, which retails for $3.95 and ships September 29. Alien Worlds #1 is scheduled to ship December 29.

Airboy Meets Mr. Monster This August

Gilbert Scripts Special Novella

Readers who have been clamouring for more Eclipse crossovers will find their appetites temporarily sated in August when Mr. Monster, the Heap, Airboy, and Valkyrie join forces in "The Cafe at the End of the World." Michael T. Gilbert's powerful story of wasted talent, lost creativity, and suicidal despair begins as the back-up in Airboy #28 and concludes one week later in the full-length Airboy/Mr. Monster Special #1.

"I've been a follower of Michael's work since he lived in Austin years ago," says editor Fred Burke, "and this story is, in my opinion, his finest. Sure, the Wraith and Mr. Monster are great comedic characters, and Michael's wit is razorsharp, but he's capable of some truly dramatic storytelling as well. This novella showcases Michael's darker, more human side."

The story begins when the Heap finds his way to the Cafe Oblivion, where an old man sits and drinks, thinking over his career as a Golden Age ghost artist. Once, long ago, he had dreamed of creating his own character, but a lifetime later all he has done is uncredited work on a vast array of comics, including Airboy and Air-Fighters. Now these characters gather round him—the heroes versus the villains—for the final battle, the battle for his life, his soul.

"It's the longest story I've ever done, says Gilbert, "and one of the strongest. It's a Mr. Monster story with some teeth to it. I wanted to do a story that was more serious, more poignant…to present a microcosm of life for a cartoonist, particularly during the dark ages before creator's rights."

The Airboy/Mr. Monster Special is a fitting end to Mr. Monster's three year run at Eclipse. Although fan support has been extremely gratifying, retailers underestimated the salespower of the critically acclaimed Mr. Monster. The series concluded with issue #10.

"This special, with its direct tie-in to Airboy #28, should be one of our better sellers in August," says circulation manager Sean Deming. "It will have the added push of Mr. Monster's devoted following, as well as the increased sales all our crossovers experience."

Airboy #28 is a $1.25 Mando book shipping August 18. Airboy/Mr. Monster Special #1 is $1.75 Baxter book and ships August 25.

THIS IS FIT TO PRINT NUMBER 167. For further details, i recommend Nicholas Pileggi's book, Wiseguy.

"BUSTING OUT": In the shadowy world surrounding organized crime, legitimate and semi-legitimate businesses exist as fronts for the laundering of money and the disposal of stolen swag. Many of the supposedly legitimate establishments are also covers used to run a scam whereby an entrepreneur can combine the network of credit offered in our open society with the underworld of black marketeering. Establishing what seems to be a profitable and upright business is often just the prelude to deliberately destroying it through a process known as "busting out." Here's how it works…

A restaurant owner with criminal ties (or a criminal who may run the restaurant as a sideline) establishes a line of credit with legitimate suppliers of food products, in particular expensive ones such as frozen shrimp, steaks, and caviar. Like just about everybody in America, he manages to get thirty day credit before he must pay his bills. Each month, however, he sells a bit of the food he's bought on the black market, where he gets about half its value. Of course, this leaves him with virtually no profit, so he starts to string his supplier along by not paying on time. Says he's had a bad month. Says his employees are stealing from him. Says he's behind now but he'll catch up real soon, honest.

If the supplier kicks, the guy may have to pay interest on his unpaid balance, but that doesn't bother him, because what he is doing here is not simply ripping off the supplier for a few bucks. He's actually attempting to find out exactly how far the supplier will extend his credit—in preparation for a much more profitable "bust out" at a later date.

What's the supplier to do? If he cuts the guy off, he'll never get his shrimp and steaks back, and he'll never see his money either. So gradually, a bit at a time, he starts carrying the restaurant owner along for 45 day credit, 60 day credit, even 120 day credit if the guy keeps on paying interest on his back balance and seems sincere, contrite and humble.

Of course, no restaurant buys all its food from a single supplier, so while this is going on, the owner is stringing dozens of suppliers out, testing each one to the limit, to the magic point where they threaten to cut him off. He always pays just enough to keep from being cut off, though, because he is orchestrating a "bust out," and that takes good timing and lots of advance planning to work well. So he's paying some suppliers on net thirty, some on 60 with interest, some on 120 with interest—whatever terms he can arrange with each one. In this way he may handle three hundred thousand dollars' worth of food on credit every month.

Then, when all the suppliers are stretched to their respective breaking points, the restaurant owner begins the "bust out." He's set up for black market sales at deeply discounted prices for the tons of food he can buy on credit. Even if he sells a dollar-fifty bag of frozen shrimp for ten cents, he's made a ten cent profit, so toward the end of a "bust out," stuff is going out his back door just as fast as it's coming in the front. Customers are even told, "Sorry, we're all out of shrimp," because selling these foods on the black market can be more profitable than cooking them and serving them for individual retail sales to customers, no matter how hungry the customers may be.

Eventually the guy's credit will run out and he won't get any more food, but by then it's too late for the suppliers to reclaim their merchandise—there are no steaks or shrimp in the freezer, no jars of caviar in the pantry. They've all been sold out the back door, and that three hundred thousand dollars' worth of merchandise acquired on credit has become thirty thousand dollars in cold, hard, untaxable profit. In one month.

As soon as the suppliers cut him off, the restaurant owner declares bankruptcy. His assets are negligible—a few tables and chairs. If he's really savvy, he'll arrange for a "theft" of these pieces of equipment and store them somewhere until he can start a new restaurant under another name. Sometimes a particularly enterprising restaurant owner will even burn his own building down for the insurance money, after secretly looting it of all valuable property. Protected by the lenient bankruptcy laws of this nation, he then pretends to hang his head in shame and vows to "make good" in a new restaurant just as soon as he can get credit with his suppliers.

Now you may ask yourself, why doesn't somebody blow the whistle on a "bust out"? Well, human greed answers that. If other restaurant owners can buy black market shrimp at ten cents on the dollar, they aren't going to squeal…and in some cases this sort of stuff is sold directly to retail customers in open-air venues such as flea markets. Nobody has called the cops on a twenty cent steak yet—and nobody ever will.

"BUSTING HEADS": Lest you read the above and think it's the perfect blueprint for a life of crime, i should warn you that suppliers of frozen shrimp, steaks and caviar don't take kindly to being "busted out" by a restaurant owner, and with no legal recourse against a carefully staged bankruptcy, they occasionally take matters into their own hands. Sometimes they hire a bunch of plug-uglies, go down to the restaurant and kick the owner's teeth down his throat. This is called "busting heads." Here's how it works…

the sudden disappearance of a title from DC subscription ads precedes a cancellation notice. It happened with Blue Devil and 'Mazing Man, to name a couple, and, if you'll notice recent DC issues, Swamp Thing is conspicuous by its absence.

[Some of the titles you list have appeared, some of the publishers you cite have gone out of business.

"Purporting to be a guide"? Goodness.

If we did nothing but wait around for news of all kinds to come to us, our readers would have some blank pages to peruse. We regularly call publishers to ask about delays — or to ask them to improve their communications with us. The larger companies tend to be more conscientious about notifying us of delays and cancellations, we've found.

We do not invariably pursue complications in schedules from small or starting companies, some of which die a-borning; time and cash don't permit it. But we check on what we can — just as we do in bringing readers the news.

(By the way, the most frequent causes for publishing delays are slow production on the part of the creative team — and we include making changes called for in the editing process, as well — cash-flow problems delaying the actual printing and distribution, and low advance orders from distributors which sometimes lead to rescheduling and resolicitation.)

Swamp Thing has changed format, which accounts for its removal from the newsstand subscription forms.]

I certainly enjoyed The Space Merchants [by Frederik Pohl and C.M. Kornbluth] and The Merchants' War [by Pohl] and I'm glad you recommended them in an editorial last year. The satire in these books really had me laughing when I first read them as Venus, Inc., and I can't recall having ever read funnier jabs at the advertising profession.

Another book that might be of interest to you and your readers because of its subject matter is The Man Who Could Make Things Vanish by Jack Cady. This book also might make an enjoyable adaptation into comics, but I'm not too sure. The power to make things vanish, as treated in the book, is not accompanied by bolts of light or sound effects. Things are simply made to vanish, which leads me to think that a comic-book adaptation would have to resort to the use of a lot of double panels, the first showing the object before its disappearance, the second showing an empty space.

The book is worth reading, however, because of its depiction of the people who hold this power. An interesting idea that the book brings up is that the cultivation of the ability to make things vanish usually comes only after a person has gained the wisdom not to interfere in human events, something like "With great power comes great responsibility" taken to the extreme.

At a time when several comics are playing with concepts of super-abilities in the "real world," The Man Who Could Make Things Vanish might make an additional contribution to one's reading pleasure.

Attention Modern Age Date Seekers! There have been people in this forum seeking to place a date on the beginning of the "Modern Age." I do not totally disagree with the person who said that it was X-Men #94 but, if you look to this era, this is the only really momentous occasion appearing at this time.

Now my idea, which I believe represents a little more change of writing and titles in the comics industry, would be to date the beginning of the Modern Age (which I think is better than calling it the "New Wave" or "Copper" Age) at or around late 1984 to mid-1985 surrounding both Crisis on Infinite Earths, and the first issue of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, which, to me, represents the ushering in of the independent craze, where everybody and his brother decided to start their own comic book. (Not that I'm putting down independents, it's just there are so many!)

Now you're saying, "That's absurd — how can he justify putting the beginning of the age at Crisis?" Well, Crisis did at least three major things that I can think of right off the top of my head: It gave new meaning to the word "crossover" and Marvel decided to use this concept a few months later in Secret Wars II. It gave DC a chance to start over, revamping its entire line of titles and, as a result of Crisis, DC is redefining some of its major characters which, in essence, is basically what happened to begin the Silver Age, right?

Also during this period of about half to three-quarters of a year, a lot of people started realizing that there are other ways to write a comic, and that this Alan Moore guy was writing some stuff that was pretty good on a low-selling title like Swamp Thing. I'm not saying that no one had realized this until then, but this was the time that prices on Swamp Thing started to go up, and the general comic-buying public sat up and started taking notice.

While going through some back issues of CBG recently, I came across one from December 1985. I decided to give it a quick re-read before throwing it out (unfortunately, storage space is a limited factor). In the "Oh, So?" column, Don was wondering how Starfire (of The Teen Titans) can see, as she has no "black area" in her eyes. Here are a couple of ideas.

One must remember that the pupil — the black part of the eye — is, in effect, a hole in the eye through which light passes, being focused on the rod and cone cells on the back of the eye (the retina), where the light is changed to electrical pulses and transmitted to the brain.

Now, if Starfire's eyes are constructed the same as ours, she can still see. Possibly the green color is a protective coating on the eye, evolved in the natives of Tamaran to shield out a particularly harmful wave length of light from Tamaran's sun. In this case, it would block out just one, very narrow, color wave length, with almost no effect on overall vision. (As an aside, Starfire would still be able to see Changeling; after all, his eyes, hair and costume are different colors).

Or, maybe there isn't one "pupil," but many, each too small to be seen individually, but all together making a large enough aperture to allow perfect vision — sort of like an insect's compound eyes, but on a much more complex scale. This, too, might be a natural response to the solar radiation on Tamaran.

But why stick with the way our eyes are constructed? Coming from a different evolutionary path, her eyes might be radically different.

Maybe, instead of being spherical, like our eyes, hers are flat — like a TV screen. Not needing focusing arrangements, her retina is almost exposed to the outside world. A transparent "cover" is there, to allow for free travel of the eyelid, and to protect the retina from foreign objects. The green color might just be the natural color of the rod and cone cells in the retina (assuming that rod and cone cells are what make up a Tamaranian retina).

Of course, this is a discussion that may be pointless — after all, who knows what we will find if, and when, we run into real extraterrestrials? I have a feeling that we will be surprised beyond our wildest dreams.

Many months ago, before the censorship scare totally took over the "Oh, So?" section of your excellent publication, there was a discussion going on pertaining to the betterment of the comics medium. Unfortunately, because of this ratings and grading question, letters regarding the subject of how we could upgrade the comics (making them more enjoyable to read and look at rather than making them universally acceptable), are now rarely seen.

I would like to address a certain aspect of this topic while quickly dismissing the censorship question. The industry has to take note that the "pressure" it is feeling regarding "offensive" material is all coming from the inside. There have been no organized pressure groups focusing undue attention on the comics medium per se. There are only occasional TV evangelists or over-enthusiastic radio or newspaper commentators who cite the "evils" of comic books as only a part of a larger "problem."

Their negative mentioning of the medium we all love so well has thrown a few prolific individuals into a panic. Their collective voice has been loud and others have climbed aboard the band wagon while still others have sought to pull off its wheels. All of these people are industry insiders: publishers, writers, artists, distributors and dealers who have frightened each other into setting standards which in no way reflect the desires of the majority.

The whole situation is like a book publisher calling up a censor to say, "Don't look at my books, they're OK!" Now, even if the censor had never even heard of this publisher's work, you can bet your Bible-thumper's gold tooth that they're going to go out and subject that loudmouth publisher's books to the most outrageous scrutiny. If we don't stop making all this noise, some outsider is going to begin looking over our shoulders.

It's like I said a few months ago in your letter column: All this publicity-seeking toward the mainstream press is going to cause more harm than good in the long run.

This current nonsense has crowded the discussion of the betterment of the medium off your pages. While this is going on we've forgotten how important it is to upgrade our efforts so that we can keep the audiences we have and build new ones. This can be achieved as long as creators keep up with the latest trends and realize that the sophistication of their audience and potential audience is growing at a faster rate than ever.

We mustn't overlook the current efforts that many of our peers are exercising in making the medium speak for the '80s. An excellent case in point is Watchmen by Alan Moore and Dave Gibbons.

The comics medium is unique. In a book, after you have read the climax, you can go back and re-read certain sections to see if the clues were actually there, but there are no graphics to support the words. It is often difficult for a writer to "hide" the clues when everything must be there in cold type. In plays, television, and movies, once the scene goes by, that's it. If you missed any clues or important points, there's no going back (although this has changed somewhat with the advent of VCRs) to study. Spielberg fills his films with foreshadowings of what's to come (especially in Back to the Future) but these are often lost unless you do have a VCR.

With Watchmen, Moore and Gibbons use every micro-inch of the medium to tell their excellent story. Their brilliant blend of words and pictures not only advances the story, but they tell you everything that's going to happen in upcoming issues. Every headline on every newspaper blowing in the wind must be read: Every character strolling through the background must be watched carefully. Every bit of seemingly throwaway dialogue must be noted and remembered.

In #1, we see Rorschach in his Kovacs identity wandering through the story. Moore tells you that this is Rorschach by the detective's reaction to him as they pass him on page four and Gibbons enhances it by having Rorschach's first appearance on page five exactly parallel Kovacs' last appearance on page four.

Ongoing throughout the background is the mystery of the missing writer Max Shea and his importance to the plot. There is the mysterious island mentioned by The Comedian in #2 and finally seen in #8 (and there's Max Shea on that island). There are constant references to eugenics in the copy (such as Adrian Veidt's lynx beast in #4). There are earlier hints to this in #1 where, on page 25, a woman in the restaurant is being served a four-legged chicken. I'm certain that there are many, many more of these tantalizing references that I have missed.

Gibbons goes further with his backgrounds. They are completely worked out so that every time we travel down a street, the background locations are the same. Can you say the same about any other comic? Why isn't the view from J. Jonah's office always the same in Spider-Man? It's because the artists haven't taken the time and care with the comics medium that Moore and Gibbons are taking in Watchmen.

Will Eisner and Steve Ditko have used some of these methods in the past. Eisner would have The Spirit's logo on a storefront or a billboard in the splash. Many panels later, if a character passes by this same storefront or billboard, the logo's still there! Ditko would people his background with characters that we never thought were of any consequence. Then, lo and behold, one of them would turn up as a major villain many issues later (The Green Goblin is a perfect example. Norman Osborn was seen as a member of J. Jonah's club long before his identity was revealed).

Ditko would also carefully map out his characters' immediate locations so that the background settings would remain consistent. Unfortunately, no one ever noticed and he later abandoned the practice.

The extraordinary effort Moore and Gibbons have put into Watchmen will make it a book that people will not only read, but they will re-read and study for years to come. It is a perfect use of the comics medium. Its very existence is unique in that it will remain a topic of discussion long after its 12-issue run.

People may talk about Frank Miller's Dark Knight and they may re-read it time and again. It was a different use of the medium, but more in style of packaging rather than utilizing the medium in new ways. Basically, Frank told an excellent story from beginning to end with lots of great middle. Moore and Gibbons are crafting a literary and visual map with paths that can be traveled over and over again, taking different routes each time.

It can truly be said of Watchmen that nothing like this has ever been done before (at least to such a complete degree).

This is the kind of re-thinking and fresh ideas the medium needs. The quality of this product and the word of mouth praise is the kind of publicity we need. If outside attention is focused on such a project, they will only take note of the violence and sexual references in a form they see (and will always see) as a "child's" medium.

If enough people (the creators) turn their attentions to turning out better and unique products within the realm of what is currently recognized as "comic books," then, and only then, will comics be improved. The comics fans will realize the improvement; the rest of the creators will be inspired to do likewise; the publishers will realize higher profits as a result and the general public will go on thinking about comics as "children's books."

Let them think that! Their ignorance will allow us to maintain our creative freedom. The more hue and cry about our "offensive" content, be it pro or con, will eventually be our ruination.

[We have said this several times before, but we reiterate that, within five years (probably well within), Watchmen will be taught in college courses. Probably it will start, as science-fiction and mystery-fiction courses did, as non-credit courses, but it will soon be accepted. The publication of the entire Watchmen series as a graphic novel — which can be kept in print forever! — will make this prediction a certainty.]

WHEN WILL THE COMICS INDUSTRY EVER GET ITS ACT TOGETHER?

How many times a week do you ask yourself this question?

The comics industry goes through changes faster than you can react. Censorship, reduced co-op advertising dollars, a glut of black and white books, late deliveries, shaky distributors . . . all wreak havoc on the comics retailer!

Now there's a place to have your voice heard!

WHEN will this Industry get its act together?

When retailers join together with one voice and the specific goal of protecting comic retailers and their customers! It's time to develop and build the industry to which we are now giving birth!

Join us!

WHEN will this Industry get its act together?

NOT UNTIL YOU DO!

We are a group of concerned professional comic book retailers who have banded together to change things. We've created a retailer's association with the goal of improving our businesses and strengthening the industry. We are doing this by exchanging ideas, group buying, promotions and by uniting together when dealing with publishers and distributors. There is strength in large numbers!

Today's Topic: graphic novels. Is it just me, or does anyone else think that the format used by comic companies should be scrapped, and replaced with a format like the one used in The Dark Knight? No matter what people say, most graphic novels are nothing more than overpriced, oversized comic books.

A change in format would be beneficial to both the publisher and the collector. The publisher would be able to sell more of them, and the collector wouldn't feel so bad about the price.

Take the recent Emperor Doom Graphic Novel for example. This story could have easily have been a mini-series or, better yet, why didn't Marvel release it as a $2.50 one-shot like Spiderman vs. Wolverine?

Now after saying all that about graphic novels, I would like to recommend one for all those people looking for a break from the usual super-heroes comics. The Zorro Graphic Novel, published by Eclipse Comics, is one of the best graphic stories that I have ever read. You don't have to be a big fan of Westerns or Zorro to enjoy this graphic novel, any fan of action-adventure will find this to be very enjoyable. It carries a $6.95 price tag but, for once, it is really worth it.

Finally, I found the guest editorial by J. Michael Catron to reflect my feelings about black-and-white comics. I enjoy b&w comics as much as the next person, but I've gotten burned a couple of times, and it almost makes me want to stop reading them. Then along comes a title like Border Worlds and Xenozoic Tales, and my faith is renewed.

I don't think that there will ever come a day when there will only be good comics on market, but we can hope that the balance will at least be weighted toward the good side. Thanks for listening.

COMICS AND STORIES

WE'VE DONE IT!

Due to an unprecedented amount of requests for the hot Dell file copies, and our recent purchases of MILE HIGHS, bound volumes, and Key Golden Age Books, we have decided to meet these demands with our first full catalogue.

The principal catalogue will include over 15,000 Legal Dell file copies as featured in the 17th Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide. 99% of which are NM-Mint condition.

(See our Overstreet ad page 431 for general titles)

These books have seen unprecedented demand within the past 2 years, and though they appreciated considerably, are still priced at a fraction of their eventual value.

The supplementary catalogue includes a selection of Mile Highs, as well as other "Pedigree" Key Golden Age such as:

Superman #1, Whiz #1, Marvel #1, Captain America #1, Capt. Marvel #1, N.Y. Worlds Fair, Worlds Best, Submariner #1, WDC&S #1, F.C. #9, Mickey Mouse Magazines etc.

and Bound Volumes in unbelievable condition of:

Action 1-26
Batman 1-36
Detective 1-26
Superman 1-12
Tip Top
Feature Books
Large Feature Comics
Comics On Parade
Four Color #1-1300
Lone Ranger
And ALL Dell titles from 1934 to 1969
Richie Rich 1-24
Little Lotta 1-24
Sad Sack

As well as hundreds of individual Harvey file copies. That's right, we have over 500 of the publishers own reference bound file copies.

To the best of our knowledge, these books comprise the finest and diverse collection of books known to currently exist.

The catalogue is $3.00 but fully refundable with the first $20 purchase.

SF fans nominate 'Dark Knight' for Hugo Award

First time ever for comic book; comic-book category planned for next year

For the first time since the Hugo Awards (Science Fiction Achievement Awards) were begun in the early 1950s, a comic book has been nominated on the final ballot.

The Dark Knight Returns, written and pencilled by Frank Miller, inked by Klaus Janson, colored by Lynn Varley, and published by DC Comics, Warner Books, and Titan Books, has been nominated in the Best Non-Fiction category. While it received votes in all four fiction categories, the judges decided it was primarily an art book and that art books belong under non-fiction.

(A similar decision was made last year, when a humor book called Science Made Stupid was put in the non-fiction category — where it went on to win a Hugo.)

Frank Miller, who was told of the nomination by Nick Landau of the British comics and SF shop Forbidden Planet, said that he was told that a comic-book category will be added to the Hugo ballot next year. Among the SF and fantasy comic books eligible next year will be Elektra: Assassin and Watchmen.

Miller said, "The first thing that obviously leaps to mind for that ballot is Watchmen."

Asked how he felt about his nomination, Miller replied, "It feels encouraging all around, for the industry in particular. It shows that the field is expanding and that more people are noticing what comics can do."

The Hugo Awards are voted on by members of the World Science Fiction Convention and are presented at the annual convention, held on or near Labor Day Weekend. This year's convention is in Brighton, England. Voting on the Hugo Awards will be completed before the convention, with results announced there.

Final Hugo ballots were mailed by the end of May.

The full list of nominations, as reported in Locus, is as follows (these are listed as they are on the ballot, in alphabetical order by author or editor — usually):

Weinberg writes SF art dictionary

A Biographical Dictionary of Science Fiction and Fantasy Artists by Robert E. Weinberg is scheduled for release in May 1988.

The "encyclopedia-style volume" will be published by Greenwood Press and will consist of 200,000 words devoted to biographies of more than 300 artists who have worked in the field.

Weinberg said, "It includes the first biographies in hardcover of such artists as Earle Bergey, Margaret Brundage, Alex Leydenfrost, and Robert Graef."

It will even include the first published biographies of William Timlin (the artist on the highly collectible The Ship That Sailed to Mars) and Warwick Goble (who did the distinctive art for The War of the Worlds).

The book is published by an academic publisher and will — "unfortunately," Weinberg said — not include illustrations. The first chapter — about 20,000 words — will summarize the development of SF art, beginning with French art of the time of Jules Verne.

Weinberg told CBG that many works have been done on artists like Arthur Rackham, who are really children's book illustrators; that sort of artist is not covered. "It's an eclectic work, according to my tastes," Weinberg said, "though we tried to be as comprehensive as possible."

Marvel after Shooter

"A renewed sense of play"

By Maggie Thompson

An industry spokesman said, "Speculation is rampant over what Jim Shooter is going to be doing. I don't think anyone knows — possibly including Jim himself. Everyone is muttering at sixes and sevens, but no one has any facts."

While the industry waits for news of what Shooter will be doing next, there have already been some changes at the Marvel Comics offices. Walter Simonson spoke of a change in tone. "There is a sense of renewed humor. DeFalco's 'yellow' memo is a case in point. It was an effort to strike a new note."

The "yellow" memo came from the new Editor-in-Chief Tom DeFalco shortly after he assumed the role. DeFalco described it to CBG. "I wanted to set the tone of my administration, so I sent out a memo which said something like, 'Henceforth, do not use yellow in any of our books, because it makes our heroes look cowardly.' And then I put down '. . .and so it begins.'

"I just felt that we should relax a little more and get a little looser, and I felt that memo kind of set the tone.

"A long time ago I did 'Bullpen Bulletins' wherein I released similar memos. So I've brought things full circle to provide total continuity."

Asked how things are going two months into the job of editor-in-chief, Tom DeFalco told CBG, "Things are rough. Yesterday they had to wake me up for my afternoon nap. And I only had four hours for lunch, too."

His low-key humor at his own expense continued throughout the interview. Asked what image he wanted to project, he replied, "I've been told that I'm supposed to be a bit more pompous and tell people how great I am and that sort of stuff. I haven't got around to that yet. I don't have my own personality. When I find one that I like, I'll be projecting that."

He said there were many creative meetings going on at Marvel. "I've separated the kinds of meetings that we're having. Many times in the past, all the editors would be gathered and we'd have to handle administrative details that came up. I've separated those kinds of meetings from our creative meetings, because I felt that we should be spending most of our time finding ways to make the books better, trying to stimulate each other creatively, and spending less time doing administrative things.

"By separating the types of meetings I had the guys coming in thinking, 'This is a creative meeting. Let's see what ideas we can come up with.'

"We've got a number of proposals on the table right now. I always knew we had a good creative staff; I was stunned at how good they really are.

"When I said to these guys, 'Come up with your best ideas,' they blew me away. These guys are terrific.

"I'm in a great position. I don't have to think again. I've got all these other guys to do it for me."

In one of the creative meetings, DeFalco asked Stan Lee to come to Marvel Comics for a day to discuss the craft of producing comics. "I thought it would help to have a gentleman who inspired most of us give his thoughts on how we could make the current Marvel even better than it is.

"Stan was as wild as ever. He wowed and awed most of our people. I know the creative people really enjoyed it; Stan said he really enjoyed it. And I actually think he did, because he volunteered to come back.

"We didn't have as much of a discussion as I would have liked, but I think that's because so many people held Stan in such awe they hesitated to ask him questions, though he responded wonderfully to every question asked him."

Asked what new projects are in store for Marvel readers, DeFalco replied, "We have a number of proposals on the table, a number of books that I am personally interested in seeing."

Does he consider himself the average Marvel reader?

"I wouldn't say I'm the average reader. I've read 25 years of Marvel Comics. A lot of things I like to read for my own edification are not things that may appeal to the general market, but when I put my writer's cap on and my reader's cap on — I think I identify pretty well with the readers."

What have the tangible changes been at Marvel in the past two months?

"People getting a lot more relaxed, a lot more loose. It's real hard for me to point out changes. The kinds of changes we're talking about the readers won't see for another six or seven months. I feel real silly about people asking me what I'm going to do and what changes are going to occur and what the effect is going to be, because I know everybody's anxious and nervous.

"I would feel much more comfortable if, two years from now, people came to me and said, 'Well, this is what happened.'

"And I would look and I'd say, 'Oh, really?'

"I'm so immersed in it it's really hard for me to see what's going on in creative terms.

"Just the fact that there is a change at the top makes people feel more open in terms of trying different things. Change is in the air. I'd like to look at it later on and see what's come out, rather than tell everybody all the things that are going to come out.

"And who knows?

"I might bomb out."

Asked about talk of increased cooperation between creative and sales staff, DeFalco said, "I feel sales people are the ones who finally have to sell the product. It helps a little bit if we get some of their input in terms of how best to present a concept.

"Editorially, I have a lot of faith in my people. We can come up with real good comics — I hate to call it 'product.' We might not always come up with the best way of presenting those comics to the public. Certain comics appeal to certain markets, and I think that we need to use the salespeople to help us differentiate where these things should go and whether they think they'll appeal to anybody."

Walter Simonson spoke highly of the meetings in which editors, creators, and sales staff have brainstormed project ideas. "The cooperation among the departments is something that I haven't really seen before. Tom has been encouraging that sort of thing, which is really nice.

"Maybe the result of the change in any administration is that the old laws are relaxed in a way — because it's a new administration — and the new administration hasn't gotten it all figured out yet. Or at least they have plenty of things they have to get square. Tom was on the road for the first week at trade shows and stuff like that.

"I think," Simonson said, "there may be a feeling of more experimentation or that more experimentation is possible. What it really amounts to is that there had come to be an awful lot of rules about what you could and couldn't do. While the new administration is consolidating itself, it gives the rest of us a chance to fool around. I think maybe a sense of play has re-entered some of the creators and editors in a way that hasn't been true for a while — which I think is valuable, because it helps everyone enjoy what they're doing. And I think that's the key to putting out some good comics. I think maybe there's been a renewed sense of play.

"There are a lot of looney messages up on the walls; there are a lot of looney Xeroxes. There's a picture of Howard Mackie as Howard the Duck on the wall — a lot of stuff like that. (Poor Howard; I've blown his cover.) Everybody up there takes a great deal of flak.

"In the best of times, it's something that works in a very positive fashion, because it keeps the place loose, free, and easy. I think maybe Marvel had moved away from that sort of stuff for a while and now there may be a moving back — which I think can only help the atmosphere of the creative staff. It will make a difference on the books."

Kalish said, "That spirit of fun started shortly after members of the direct-sales department armed themselves. Ever since then, we've been getting tons of respect from the editorial staff. This is all true, Maggie. I'm not kidding.

"We recently hired Lou Bank to be my assistant. I thought he was sane; I was wrong."

Bank was in her office, laughing in the background as she spoke.

"The first thing he did was come into the office armed with a copious amount of plastic weaponry. It's a little-known fact that here at Marvel Comics there are routine skirmishes that are conducted after-hours. At five o'clock, the lights start to get switched off and people dressed in odd camouflage attire begin wandering around the offices, primarily the offices that are ostensibly deserted on the circulation and subscription end, and they're using little plastic Japanese pistols and rifles — and they shoot each other.

"You take your life in your hands when you work late here. It turned out that Lou had this secret desire to arm the Contras of Nicaragua with plastic guns. And he became the envy of the editorial department when he showed up with what looked like an absolute riot gun — a high-powered plastic rifle that shot nasty little bullets at people, and the editorial department just fell on their knees and said, 'Hey, we can't fight that.'

"That won us new respect from the editorial department.

"Shortly after that, Lou became a gun-runner and has become the major provider of weapons to the editorial department. I guess this is front-page news. I guess a lot of this new sense of camaraderie and respect arose out of this gun-running deal that Lou is responsible for.

"I never really thought of the editors the same way after walking past Lou's desk — where he had two humungous boxes of arms — and there were editors crawling into the boxes looking for grenades.

"There was something seriously bizarre about that. It changed my image of what these people were.

"Definitely Tom has a great deal to do with it. Tom has a jovial manner; I personally like his sense of humor a great deal, and I think that it really comes out well at editorial meetings, where he can keep discussions rolling by just throwing out ideas."

Simonson spoke of a potential future change. "I think it's possible that some people who haven't worked for Marvel for a while may be working there again. In some respects, it's already happened; John Byrne's already doing Star Brand.

"I suspect some folks who haven't worked for Marvel for a while are at least looking around and might even be working for Marvel in the next year, not necessarily exclusively."

When asked what changes he felt at Marvel, Byrne said, "Obviously, the biggest change for me is that I'm now working for Marvel again. I don't know exactly at this point how extensive my working for Marvel will be, since I'm committed up to my ears in work for DC. But certainly that door is once again open.

"My stepson, Kieron Dwyer, has just become the regular artist on Captain America, which is something I don't think would have happened a couple of months ago. He picked up that assignment, leaving me hopelessly jealous, of course, because my first comics assignment was Wheelie and The Chopper Bunch."

He said his first comment to Dwyer after Shooter was replaced was, "You realize that door is now open."

He continued, "And for the future it seems that everybody I've talked with at Marvel is very excited again. I don't get the sense of doom and gloom I used to get. I hope I'll be doing more for them when my schedule permits."

(He added, "I'm up to my ears almost entirely in Superman stuff at the moment, now that I'm taking over Adventures. The rest of my life is fine, what room I have for it around work.")

Kalish cautioned that comics fans should keep in mind that "Jim was one person. He left his position. Tom is filling it. Tom is basically working on 1988.

"The fans don't realize it, but the earliest that Marvel is operating right now is September. Marvel is going to be a little more feisty, but the summer's gone, as far as we're concerned. There's nothing we can do to change it, because — even if we came up with a brilliant project and wanted to put it out in July, how would we sell it? Our solicitation process takes longer than that, so effectively we have just closed September, which means we're dealing with October, November, and December — and then we're into 1988."

She paused to consider and said, "We do have some changes that are not minor. We have a bi-weekly series that we didn't have two months ago. We have three hardback reprint projects that we didn't have two months ago, and a lot of these projects are a direct reflection of Tom DeFalco.

"Tom is the type of person who collects the Carl Barks Library and collects the EC libraries and to him one really nice way of having comic books is to have them in a nice luxury collector hardback edition — something that you can put up on your bookshelf and be proud of.

"He wants that for Marvel Comics, because he's a Marvel Comics fan, so — lo and behold — one of the first things he wants to do and one of the first things we're going to do this October and November is to put in hard covers reprints of the first 10 issues of The Fantastic Four, The X-Men, and Spider-Man.

"So, yes, there are changes; there are changes that the marketplace will see in October, November, and December — possibly even some in September — but that's the very earliest that they're going to see any editorial alteration in Marvel Comics."

Walter Simonson told CBG, "Jim trained people very well. He really gave them a lot of the tools to do good work at what they were supposed to do. Tom inherited a well-trained staff of editors."

Louise Simonson said, "From what we understand, Tom will be concentrating on innovative and creative aspects of his job, encouraging his editors and creators alike to express their individual styles in their books."

Stan Lee

An outspoken interview with 'The Man' from Marvel

By John Weber

JW: Let's start with the wedding of Spider-Man and Mary Jane Watson. I understand that was your idea?

SL: Yeah, I've been writing Spider-Man for 25 years now and I've been doing the newspaper strip since it started eight years ago or nine years ago, whatever it is, and I think it's about time that this guy ends his single situation and becomes married, mainly because I'm trying to find something new to excite me about the strip. You know, after I've been writing something for so many years, the only way I ever feel I can write something good is if I'm interested in it myself. So I always think, 'What would I like to read?' And one day I woke up and I said I would like to read the adventures of the married super-hero. I don't know of any. You know, what would it be like to be a super-hero and have a wife? You want to go out and save the world and your wife says, "You've gotta come home, we have a bridge game tonight." So I think there would be all new problems that I haven't written about before if he becomes married and it's going to be fun to find out.

JW: What about Reed and Sue [of The Fantastic Four]?

'They're gonna go back to Spider-Man's old uniform in the comic book.'

SL: That's a little bit different because they're part of a group, you know, and in a group you can have any sort of combination of things. But a super-hero who's all by himself who gets married I think is going to be a totally different thing.

JW: So this isn't the end of Peter Parker's problems, I take it. Peter isn't going to live happily ever after, just with a whole new set of insecurities and problems.

SL: Absolutely. Heroes never live happily ever after. I would think he'll have more problems than he's ever had before. But they'll be different. I hope. I don't know what they'll be specifically, 'cause I never really know what I'm gonna do because if I know what I'm gonna do, then I'm bored writing the stories. It's more fun wondering what's gonna happen as I write the story.

JW: How tough has it been to coordinate this with the comic book and the newspaper strip? For instance, the comic book used one uniform, the newspaper strip used the other uniform, the old uniform.

SL: Well, they're gonna go back to the old uniform in the comic book. It isn't tough at all to coordinate it because I don't coordinate it. I just write my script as though there is no comic book, and they do the comic book as if there is no strip. It's too difficult. You see, the reason it would be too difficult is the time frame. I do two or three panels a day, and they do about four books using Spider-Man every month. There's no way they could be in synch with what I'm doing. So we all decided the easiest thing is — there's two Spider-Men. There's the one in the newspaper, and the one in the books, and we let it go at that.

JW: Let's take one average storyline. How much newspaper time do you get out of that one storyline?

SL: Much more than anybody else. Most newspaper strips like Mandrake or The Phantom or whatever else — there are so few adventure strips it's hard to even think of any names — they last about 13 weeks. Thirteen weeks, for some reason, seems to be the time that newspaper syndicates like to have a story running. Mine could run for six months, seven months. I just keep writing — as I say, the only test with me is when I'm starting to get bored or when I think, "Well, let's end this and get on to something else." So, as long as I can come up with ideas that I think are interesting or surprising or stimulating, I stay with a storyline. The minute I say, "That's it! I wanna wrap this up," I wrap it up.

Another reason that mine run longer than anybody else's — writing for me is rather easy. I like to write, it comes easily. But dreaming up the plots — while that's easy, too, it's very time-consuming. I've got to take a whole day and sit somewhere and say, "Well, who will the villain be, what will the problem be, how will it get resolved, what situations will come up leading up to the end?" and so forth.

> 'My mother used to say that when I sat and ate lunch or something, I had to have a book in front of me and, if I didn't have a book, I'd read the label on the ketchup bottle while I was eating. I just love reading.'

You have to work it out, as you can imagine. The longer each installment runs, the fewer new plots I have to dream up. So that's another reason I keep it running for a while. Also, it gives me a chance, I think, to get more of the human quality into the strip than any other strip.

I used to be the same way with the comic books. I would rather take a very thin, skimpy plot and expand on it, and have a lot of panels showing what the characters are thinking, putting a lot of details into their lives, rather than the villain commits a crime, the hero chases him, they have a fight, you know, and you make sure it's enclosed within a small area. But I'd rather get into all of the personality, all the characterization that I can. And that lengthens the story tremendously.

JW: What did you read growing up?

SL: Everything. I was a vora-

TIME-X-TENDERS

Our newest product, Time-X-TendersTM are our improved, acid-free backing board. Made from acid-free virgin wood cellulose they are of true archival quality. So, not only will these backing boards add rigidity to your paper collectibles, but they will act as additional preservation material to help retard the aging process of your paper collectible.

Time-X-TendersTM are TWICE as thick as our competitors' boards!

And Time-X-TendersTM are available at 1/2 the price of our previous boards!

TRUE ARCHIVAL QUALITY?
Because ordinary cardboard is itself acidic, storage in cardboard may be hazardous to your collection. But so-called "acid-free" materials may not be enough. "Acid-free" means only that cardboard measures no less than pH 7.0. Cardboard of TRUE ARCHIVAL QUALITY must have a minimum pH of 8.5 and a 3% calcium carbonate buffer throughout to provide the best protection. All our acid free products meet this stringent requirement.

cious reader. I read Tarzan, Sherlock Holmes, I read Dumas, Victor Hugo, The Hunchback of Notre Dame, things like that. I read Mark Twain — I loved Mark Twain. I loved Shakespeare. I didn't understand him that well when I was young, but I loved the music of the language. I used to remember passages of Shakespeare where I wasn't quite sure what he was saying. Like there's a line, "What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba?" I loved to read. My mother used to say that when I sat and ate lunch or something, I had to have a book in front of me and, if I didn't have a book around, I'd read the label on the ketchup bottle while I was eating.

I just love reading. Jules Verne. I like imaginative things. One of my favorites was Sherlock Holmes. I loved Sherlock Holmes because I felt he really existed. Conan Doyle wrote so realistically, and that's what I try to do with Spider-Man and my characters. I felt if you could take a fictional character and make him seem real to a reader, that's the crowning achievement for a writer. I remember when I read Les Miserables, I mean I knew Jean Valjean, I worried about him when he carried Cosette through those sewers, and I was there with him! When you can believe in the characters — I mean, I was sure there was a Tarzan!

JW: Have you ever had the ambition to write a novel — outside of super-heroes and the like?

SL: I would love to — I just never get the time. As you can imagine, I would have to take a few months off to do it. I seem to keep so busy with so many projects. My wife — who never wrote professionally in her life, who's my age — my wife a few years ago decided to write a novel, she wrote one, sold it to Dell Publishing, it's coming out this winter, she's three-quarters of the way through her second one, it's the most incredible thing! I'll be known as Mr. Joan Lee one day. But I haven't gotten around to it yet.

JW: You've been a great influence.

SL: Maybe (chuckle).

JW: Now back to the wedding for a little bit. How much outside media coverage is Spider-Man's wedding getting?

SL: Tremendous! I understand that Newsweek magazine will be there [at Shea Stadium June 5 for a home plate wedding before the Mets-Pirates game], the Associated Press, UPI, the New York Times will cover it. Good Morning America is going to have an interview with me. Spider-Man getting married, it's bigger than nuclear proliferation!

> 'I don't know what all the fuss is about. I could live with ratings, without ratings. I never would have said, "Let's do it," but if they wanna do it, what's so bad about it?'

JW: Comics in the last few years are getting all sorts of outside attention, for Dark Knight, the Superman revamping, now this. When you were writing and creating, you were just recognized by the people who bought them. Do you feel you've missed out on something?

SL: I often think I got out of the business at the wrong time. See, when we started, comics were nothing. In fact, I'd meet people at cocktail parties and they'd ask me what I do, and I never wanted to say I wrote comics because they'd walk away. So I'd say I'm a writer. Then they'd say "What do you write?" I'd say "Stories in magazines." "What kind of magazines?" "Well, for young people." "Yeah, but what kind of magazines?" At some point I had to say "Comics." "Oh. Excuse me, there's somebody over there I want to talk to."

Little by little, I think we were lucky with Marvel Comics. We were able to increase the age of our readership more and more. By the time about seven or eight or ten years ago that I stopped doing the comic books, we were just starting to get some recognition. See, what's gonna happen: Comic books will be one day accepted as a viable, valid art form. If Michaelangelo and Shakespeare were alive today, and they got together and said, "Hey, let's collaborate and do a comic strip," who in the world would say, "Ehhh, that's just a comic, that's not worth much"? I mean it would be obviously be the greatest artwork and the greatest writing you could find.

So there's nothing wrong with comics, it's a means of telling stories through words and pictures. It just depends on who does them and how they're done. And people are beginning to learn that now. Something like Dark Knight, which might have been written a bit better and more dramatically and cinematically than Batman had been for a while. It creates attention.

Eventually, comics will be done the way they're done in Europe — in hardcover and sold in bookstores. If they're bad, people will say, "I didn't like that one," and if they're good, they'll receive as much attention as any other form of literary endeavor.

JW: This is a personal thought of mine. Comics are entering the mainstream, but still, articles mention the "Zap, Pow, Wham" everytime they mention comics, right from the Batman TV series. Has that affected comics being taken seriously?

SL: I don't think it did comics any good, no. It held them up to ridicule, it was almost like saying, "Look how silly these things are." It made a lot of money for the producer. But it wasn't a bad series. For what it was, it was very entertaining. I guess nothing is really bad if it's well done. And it was well-done.

> 'I'm a very malleable guy and I can work under any set of rules if I have to. I didn't like the idea of the Comics Code coming in when it did, but I saw the reason for it. I wouldn't have written any different stories, even if there hadn't been a Code.'

I don't think it hurts comics. The only things that will hurt comics are the only things that will hurt novels or movies or television or ballet or opera or anything: things within that medium that are not done well. People crave entertainment.

People, especially young men, have always loved fantasy. Comics today, the super-hero comics, are one of the best providers of fantasy. You know, where else can you get fairy tales for grown-ups other than the comics? Occasionally, George Lucas or [Steven] Spielberg do a movie, but there's so little of that. You can buy a science-fiction magazine, or science-fiction novel, and those are great, but very often they're a little too heavy, and comics are probably the most enjoyable way to read a fantasy story.

In my mind, there's nothing wrong with pictures accompanying words. You're still reading. But it's like parents will sometimes say, "I don't want Johnny to read comics because he doesn't use his imagination." That's a little silly. You don't say that if you go to a Broadway show. You don't say "I don't want to go to the show because I see it on the stage, I'm just gonna read the script of the play." You don't say that about a good movie, "I don't wanna go to the movie because there are pictures on the screen." It's the same thing. There's nothing wrong with words and pictures. It's probably one of the most enjoyable ways of getting a story. And there's certainly nothing wrong with reading a story without pictures. As I said, I was one of the most avid readers that I know of years ago, and I still am. But one thing doesn't necessarily negate the other thing. They all have a place. Anything that imparts information enjoyably, I think, is worthwhile.

JW: Let's talk about the proposed rating-labeling system for comics that has people in the industry in an uproar. You've been on both sides, as a writer, creator, publisher, editor. How do you feel about it?

SL: Well, I'll probably make a lot of enemies by saying this. It doesn't bother me at all. I don't know what all the fuss is about. I could live with ratings, without ratings. I never would have said, "Let's do it," but if they wanna do it, what's so bad about it? Motion pictures are rated. I've heard the word censorship bandied about — I don't see that it's censorship. You do any story you want. After you've done it, they decide, is it an R? A PG?

JW: Does having that labeling affect the way you write?

SL: It doesn't affect the way I write.

JW: Let's say I want something to go to a general audience.

SL: Then you should damn well write for a general audience! I think a writer has an obligation. I think when you're writing for kids, you have an obligation to use some discretion. I don't think that's censorship — I think that's a matter of taste. Now you may not agree with the rating — you may feel the guys who are rating it are idiots. That could happen.

I've never been much of a crusader in those areas. I'm a very malleable guy and I can work under any set of rules if I have to. I didn't like the idea of the Comics Code coming in when it did, but I saw the reason for it. I wouldn't have written any different stories, even if there hadn't been a Code. I, personally, have no intention of getting very sexy or very violent in anything I do. I don't think it's necessary. And as long as I feel some young people read what I write, I'm sure as hell going to try to exercise taste. If someone wants to label it, you know, let them label it if they want to.

By the same token, I respect other people's opinion. If they decide not to use the rating system, let them not use it. I'm not involved in it any more because I've been away from the comics. All I can say honestly is I really am not sure. Maybe it's because I haven't looked into it enough. Maybe if I spoke to some of the guys, I'd find out that they had very real and valid reasons for being upset. But, at this moment, I don't know why anyone is upset.

Next:* Stan Lee gives his views on violence in comic books, Jim Shooter, and other topics and reveals some of Marvel's upcoming movie and television projects.

Find out who said this about Winging It

why ME...?
©1987 R. Gregory

And find out why.

WINGING IT is like nothing you've ever read.

It's about revolution, religion, sexuality, class struggle, ambiguity, faith, life and death. And love. And a lot more. It's a metaphysical/science-fiction epic following parallel spiritual journeys of a diverse cast of players who walk some fine lines between Good & Evil, Human & Animal, Male & Female, Sane & Insane-- Extraterrestrials, Angels, Demons, Dolphins, Animal-people, People-animals-- and Human Beings, too. It's a story written with intelligence, humor, irony, and empathy-- created as a personal expression rather than a product. And intentionally different from other stories in the comic book/graphic novel medium.

And some people REALLY like it a lot! (The above excerpts are from the letters pages of Issues #1 and #2 based on preview copies/synopses.) It's not a story for everyone... but it might be for you.

WINGING IT-- 10 issues, bi-monthly, b&w, 32 pages, cover price $2.00. Written and drawn by Roberta Gregory. FOR MATURE READERS.

Distributed by Alternate Realities, Bud Plant, Capital City, Cavco, Diamond, Friendly Frank's, Glenwood, Heroes' World, Second Genesis, Styx, Sunrise & Titan.

OR send $2.50 (plus age statement) for Issue #1. (Issue #2 available in August.) Payable to: SOLO PRODUCTIONS, P.O. BOX 3335, VAN NUYS, CA 91407.

A WACKY ONE-SHOT FROM COMICO THE COMIC COMPANY

Comics Guide

By Don Thompson

This is only a token column; so much news broke this week that I have been virtually crowded out.

I'm torn on what to review this week. On my desk, I have this box full of current (or, at least, recent) comics. Also on my desk, I have this enormous pile of photocopies of forthcoming comics.

(I call them photocopies because, if I call them xeroxes, I'll get a condescending letter from Xerox's lawyers, pointing out that Xerox is a brand name and should never be used generically, which I consider a waste of my time and theirs — though lawyers get paid more for wasting time. Not only is theirs a cause as foredoomed as were attempts to keep Flashlight and Aspirin as brand names, but — as humorist Dave Barry has said — you just know that the Xerox people call them xeroxes among themselves.)

But I digress, as I'm sure you've noticed.

I'll tackle the comic books this week, since the box is more than full and I have room for another three inches of (ahem) photocopies before I have to press the panic button.

- Johnny Gambit #1 ($1.75) is the only Hot Comic I have ever seen, so I don't know if all of them are printed on coated stock as this one is. I prefer mando paper. This is a stylized street-gang comic book with a poor script but good art. It apparently takes place on some other world or at some other time, but it is based on modern city life and it has a gritty, street-wise feeling to it. If you like the art in Mister X, this should please you right down to your socks.

- Jonny Quest #11 ($1.50) is the second issue in this series to convey honest pathos, possibly the rarest thing in comic books — and Bill Messner-Loebs has done it twice in one year (see Jonny Quest #2). I found this story about the dognapping of Bandit especially moving for personal reasons, but any pet lover can identify with Jonny and Bandit.

In Journey, Bill made us privy to the thoughts of a dog for comic effect; here he lets us inside the minds of dogs for a different reason.

We have some superb writers in comic books these days and Bill Messner-Loebs is one of them. His talent too often is unacknowledged.

Incidentally, this issue also has a cover by a genuine fine artist who happens to be working in comics these days, one Bill Sienkiewicz. The interior art is by Joe Staton and Rick Burchett, the lettering by Bob Pinaha, and the coloring by Rick Taylor — and all of them do good, sensitive work. This one is a winner all the way.

- Johnny Hazard Quarterly #3 is another of those incredibly generous publications from Dragon Lady Press. For $5.95, you get a year's worth of Sunday adventures (May 1947 to May 1948) by Frank Robbins, wrapped in a nifty cover by Alex Toth. You can build a very fine library of adventure strips — printed with extreme clarity on very good white paper — by collecting the full line of Dragon Lady Press books. Other excellent comic strips collected by DLP include On Stage, Dick Tracy (the current version), Buz Sawyer, Wash Tubbs, and Little Orphan Annie.

- Doug Wildey, creator of Jonny Quest, has adapted three of his favorite stories from the original TV series for Jonny Quest Classics. The first issue (Comico, $2) features "Shadow of the Condor," a beautifully plotted and gorgeously painted story about the Quests in the hands of a crazed Nazi war criminal, a story admittedly patterned on Richard Connell's "The Most Dangerous Game." Highly recommended.

- I recommended The Liberty Project (Eclipse, $1.75) a while ago from photocopies (he said, studiously avoiding the "x" word) but I'd like to reiterate my recommendation now that the actual color comic book is out. This is a highly enjoyable super-hero comic, featuring a group of super-powered juvenile delinquents doing community service as super-heroes — sort of a cheerier Suicide Squad. Don't get the idea that this is any kind of heavy stuff — it is, as I said, a highly enjoyable super-hero comic.

Batiuk takes strip to new syndicate

Tom Batiuk, creator of the comic strip Funky Winkerbean, was in his youth utterly traumatized by a cantankerous old bus driver. So he has decided to bring this character back to life in a new daily strip.

Creators Syndicate will distribute Batiuk's Crankshaft, which began June 8. Ed Crankshaft is a lovable curmudgeon anyone can identify with — especially over a cup of early morning coffee when the world might not seem as sweet and syrupy as the comics often make it out to be.

To the dismay of his accountant son-in-law Jeff and his long-suffering but loving daughter Pam and their two children, Ed Crankshaft has simply aged beyond any sense of decorum — if he ever had any. He sees the world in black and white, good and bad — but mostly bad, and all inevitable.

"But," said Batiuk, "there's a warm human being under that hard exterior — somewhere."

Batiuk began developing his interest in cartooning while still

Aircel asks distributors not to pay — by mail

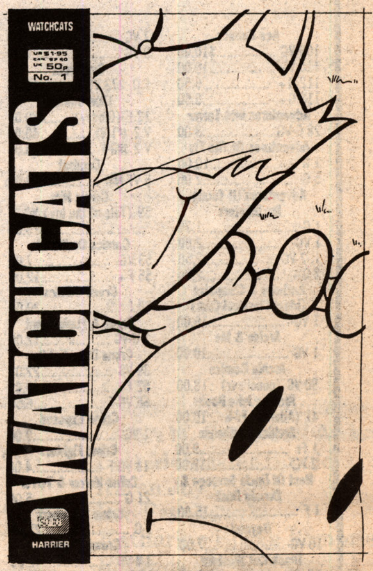
"Don't let a couple of my distributors read that headline," Ken Campbell said, laughing, "but Canada is going to have a mail strike June 16, so I've called many of the major distributors in the United States and asked them not to mail us a check. We've arranged with those who owe large amounts to pay via Federal Express or Purolator checks.

"We're asking smaller distributors not to pay small amounts — say, $200-$300. We'd like them to consolidate their payments until the amount is in the $1000 range and pay us then via Federal Express or Purolator."

Campbell continued, "Having gone through the same situation in 1982 with a postal strike when we were running a construction company, we have made preparations for this; we've built up our bank account facing this situation. We have trimmed expenditures and feel we can comfortably survive even a three- or four-month postal strike.

"As in all things in business, preparation and foresight will generally overcome most problems. We do not anticipate any problems with shipping the books, as we ship them all via UPS."

He paused and went on, "Our distributors should be aware we'll be only too happy to Federal Express invoices, in case they were losing any sleep over that." He laughed again.



'Watchcats,' 'Cyborg Gerbils' move to Harrier

Watchcats, a one-shot parody of the Alan Moore-Dave Gibbons Watchmen series, will be appearing from Britain's Harrier Comics in late June, in hopes of tying in with DC's release of the final issue of Watchmen, #12.

Formerly scheduled to appear in February from another British independent comics company, Trigon Comics, the project, written and drawn by Post-Atomic Cyborg Gerbils creator John Jackson, was suspended when Trigon recently folded.

"Watchcats is not the sort of title Harrier Comics is best known for," said Harrier's publisher, Martin Lock, "but we felt that it was too good not to appear. Although the black-and-white parody genre is much (and often justly) maligned, we believe John's work to be of outstanding quality."

Another John Jackson project for Harrier is the one-shot Tales of the Cyborg Gerbils. Two issues of the adventures of the Post-Atomic Cyborg Gerbils were published by Trigon, and Jackson said he wishes to conclude their saga with one final special edition, featuring four complete short Gerbil stories, with painted covers by Alan Davis and John Higgins. No release date for Tales of the Cyborg Gerbils #1 has been set.

Flashback: 35 years ago

Weird Fantasy #13 (June 1952) adapts two short stories by Ray Bradbury. Bradbury informs the publishers of their oversight in not paying for the use of his work. EC Comics sends Bradbury a check.

in elementary school in Elyria, Ohio, where he was born and raised. Though he now lives in Cleveland, he still occasionally substitute-teaches at his old high school just to keep in touch. This preoccupation with teaching, plus the fact that, in his own words the cartoonist and his wife Cathy "are currently being raised by their 7-year-old son Brian," lends his work a universal, ageless appeal.

Assisted on the graphics for Crankshaft by editorial cartoonist Charles (Chuck) Ayers of the Akron Beacon-Journal, Batiuk has created a character who unabashedly speaks his mind where we would never dare to. This sentiment is best expressed by a comment from the master curmudgeon himself: Told to "Have a nice day" by the nurse at the doctor's office, he replies "Make me!"

Batiuk's newest comic strip takes its place beside B.C. by Johnny Hart, Herblock, and the world's most widely read columnist, Ann Landers, in a growing family of features syndicated by Creators Syndicate.

Of his decision to take his newest strip — besides Funky, Batiuk also writes John Darling, about a talk-show host — to Creators Syndicate, Batiuk wrote a letter to newspaper

Well known cartoonist Tom Batiuk was born in Akron, Ohio. He first developed an interest in drawing cartoons in elementary school in Elyria, and has pursued his craft ever since.

Having received his Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree from Kent State University in 1969, he returned to Elyria to teach Art at Eastern Heights Junior High School. During this time he created the popular comic strip FUNKY WINKERBEAN, based on his teaching experiences. "FUNKY" now appears in over 350 newspapers.

The immediate success of this comic enabled -- or rather demanded -- that he work at it full time. With the debut of his new comic strip CRANKSHAFT, syndicated by Creators Syndicate, the cartoonist now pulls a double load. However he still occasionally sits in as a substitute teacher at his old high school for inspiration -- and because he claims to have an abnormal craving for cafeteria food.

In his spare time, he says, he enjoys music, tennis and jogging, but not all at the same time.

Tom Batiuk and his wife Cathy are currently being raised by their seven-year-old son Brian.

editors which said, in part:

"If, as a young boy, I'd been told that I couldn't play marbles with the big kids unless I gave them all of mine to keep forever, as well as any others I might acquire in the future, I'd have laughed at the thought.

"And yet, for the longest time, that's exactly how the syndicated comics industry has been run. As a first year teacher, I took my experiences, students, and co-workers, and turned them into a comic strp called Funky Winkerbean. But, in order to see those characters on a comics page, I had to sign a contract that the Big Kids wrote, supposedly giving themselves ownership of my comic strip drawings — forever.

"Such was the fate facing any new cartoonist until Rick Newcombe and his exciting new Creators Syndicate appeared. By offering creators unequivocal ownership of their work, he makes them partners with Creators Syndicate in their success rather than captives of it.

"That's why I'm proud to be joining Ann Landers, Johnny Hart, and Herblock at Creators Syndicate with my new feature Crankshaft. I'm excited about being with this family of artists as they step forward to signal a revolution in this industry!

"From this point on, young cartoonists cannot only dream of being on the comics page, but they can keep their dreams as well."

TOM BATIUK

AUTOBIOGRAPHY:

Born in Akron, Ohio, it became apparent almost immediately that Tom Batiuk would be an Ohioan. He messed around in school until 1969, when he and Kent State University worked out a deal over his gym locker fees and he was out of there.

He then decided to get serious and began his meteoric rise to the top of the cartooning profession. He created FUNKY WINKERBEAN in 1972 and it is now carried in over forty thousand newspapers. In late 1973, he firmly established in his own mind that he was the premier cartoonist in the world and has retained that title ever since. Although he hasn't won any major awards, he shows his consumate class by not whining about it much.

Suave, debonair, and rakishly good-looking, he's in constant demand as a public speaker, but turns down all requests so he can spend his time with his wife Cathy and son Brian on a palatial estate befitting someone of his stature.

He's especially excited about syndicating his new feature CRANKSHAFT with Creators Syndicate, because of their unique stand allowing cartoonists to write their own biographies.

Dilemma II

Attempts made to get in-print comics into the retail stores

By Maggie Thompson

In CBG for June 19, the dilemma of in-print but unavailable comics was first reported. Comics publishers are frustrated that retailers are often unable to get from distributors comics that are still available at wholesale rates from the publishers.

Two weeks later, CBG is continuing to pursue the story and has gathered even more confirmation that the problem is industry-wide.

DC Sales Manager John Pope told CBG, "There are some factors that contribute to problems with reorders: It might be XYZ Distributor or it might be the warehouse.

"Our minimum reorder is 50 copies across the board; the only time this changes is when there's a difference in what fits in the box — as, for example, with the Dark Knight book. And our minimum poster reorder is 25.

"We can't expect our warehouse people or our printers to break down the factory prepacks. The easier it is for the distributor to handle it, the more likely he is to do it. He could reorder an in-print item, but he'd have to order 50 copies.

"We are concerned about it. For the last four years we've sent regular Mailgrams on back stock. For about the last year, we've started sending lists of last-minute updates to all drop-ship points for posting. In January we began a retailer hotline which gives him information.

"We stand ready to make it easier for distributors and shops, if someone has a suggestion of how it is to be done.

"If a retailer has a distributor who won't place a reorder for our minimum, the retailer should call me. If the distributor doesn't want to place such a reorder, I want to know about it. I spoke to Walter Wang and Capital City about this, and they feel the solution should be corrected at the retailer level."

He said there was one other aspect of the marketplace that affected the situation. "It's common knowledge that the retailer sometimes buys from one distributor for his initial order and another for back stock. That second distributor may take the back-stock order but, legitimately, service his primary customers first and then not have back stock available for his secondary customers."

Marvel Comics' Carol Kalish (director of specialty sales) said, "It can be frustrating."

She gave an example of the sort of problems Marvel faces. "It happened with our Doctor Strange poster, which was almost an albatross around our necks." She laughed.

"Through a mix-up we ended up with two times the amount of that poster that we needed. We had 15,000 extra posters.

"But, as I talk with retailers around the country now, they say to me, 'Doggone it, Marvel better get off its duff and reprint that Doctor Strange poster! We need more copies now!'

"We still have mounds of first-printing Doctor Strange posters available for reorder."

Marvel's minimum for a reorder of posters is 10.

"We produce a list monthly and send that in-stock report on previous inventory to distributors and their warehouses. When we run out of stock in a non-periodical item, we wait two months and solicit the marketplace asking retailers to check their inventory. Then we resolicit it as if it were new product.

"That lets us know how many to print."

She said there are many items available in back stock. "For example, we sell 200 to 250 copies of The Death of Captain Marvel Graphic Novel every month on back order. Its sales

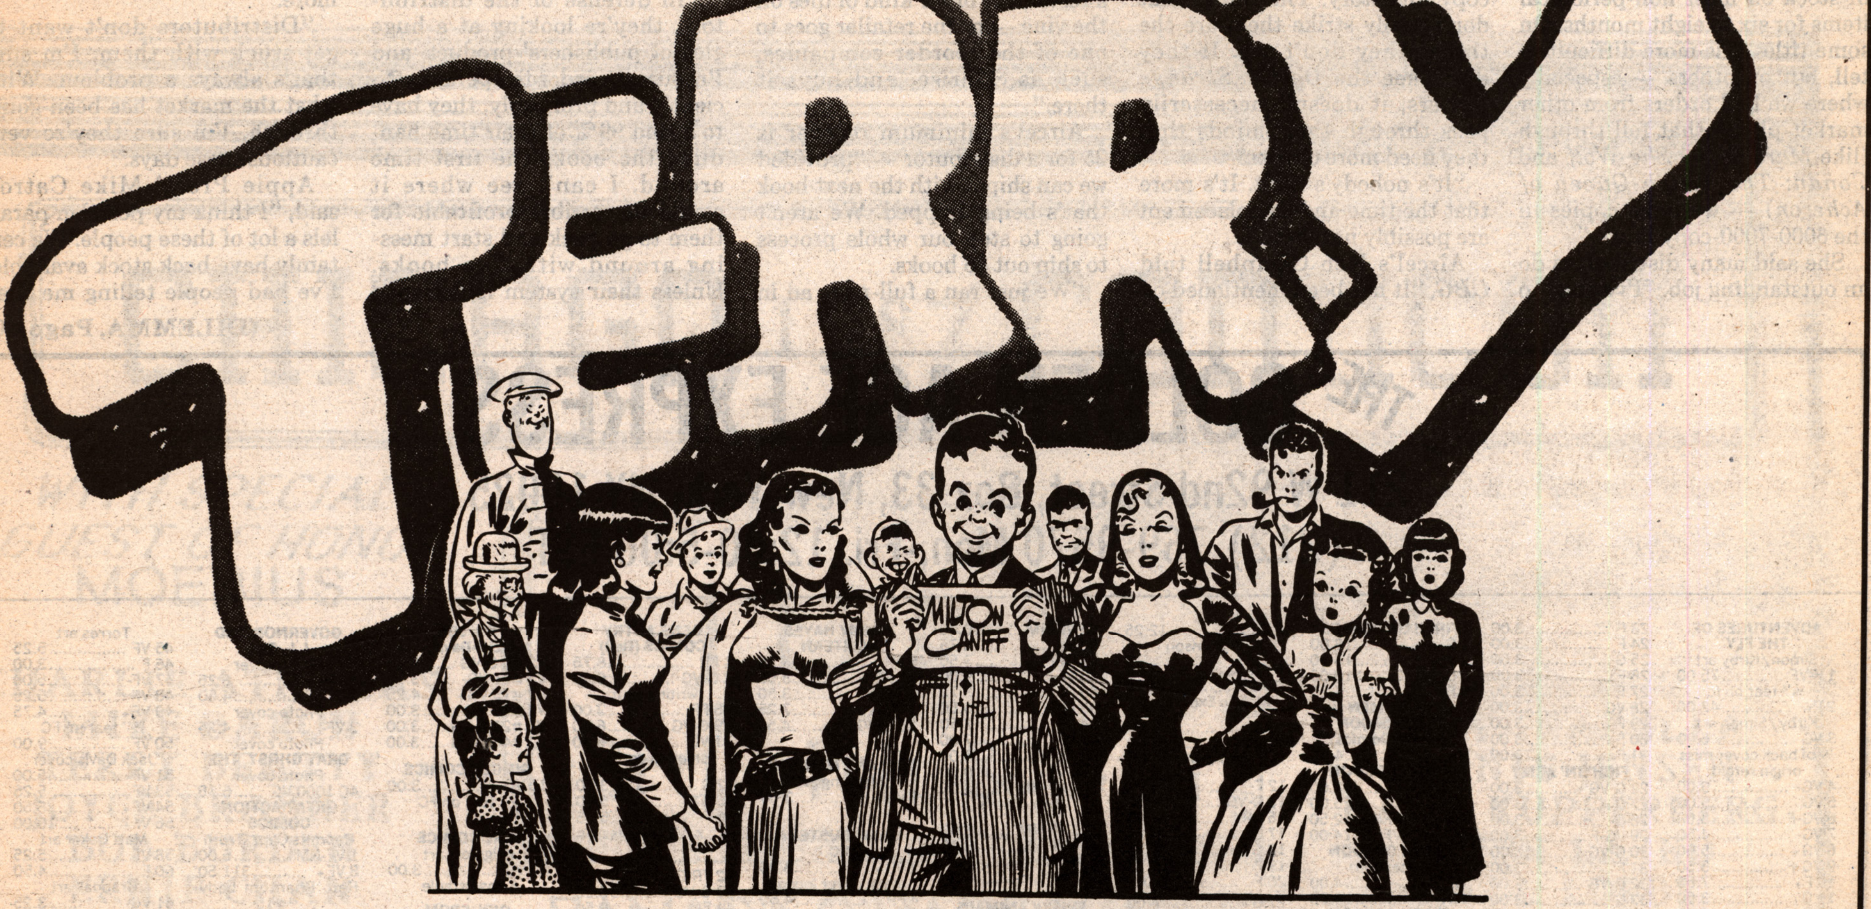
The Completion of an Historic Publishing Event!



TERRY
MILTON CANIFF

AND THE PIRATES

Vol. 12, 1945-1946, AVAILABLE NOW

Vol. 12 marks the completion of a unique publishing event begun three years ago. This reprint of Milton Caniff's TERRY & THE PIRATES by NBM is the first complete reprint of a classic newspaper comic strip. Our handsome hardboard collector's editions have set the standard for strip reprints.

In Vol. 12, Caniff pays tribute to the characters he lovingly created, bringing back the most famous, BURMA, CAPT. BLAZE, TONY SANDHURST, and more, in a dramatic final episode. The saga ends with the poignant sunday page of Dec. 26, 1947 in which TERRY, and Caniff, say goodbye, and walk off the page.

Back editions still available

DILEMMA

are very steady. We know from that exactly when we're going to run out of copies; it will happen this August. In October, we'll resolicit the title and go back to press.

"Retailers should know we're in stock on most non-periodical items for six to eight months. On some titles it is more difficult to tell, but on others — especially where we had orders from other market places that fell through (like Marada the She-Wolf and Conan: The Witch-Queen of Acheron) — we have copies in the 6000-7000-copy range."

She said many distributors do an outstanding job. "I've gone to a lot of warehouses, and I see these in-stock reports prominently posted on a bulletin board someplace. But I know what happens on Thursday, which is the day that most retailers come to the warehouses for pick-up. They come in, they buy their comics, they look at the recent copy inventory. The things that don't really strike them are the things they don't see. If they don't see the Doctor Strange posters, it doesn't necessarily pass through their minds that they need more of them.

"It's nobody's fault. It's more that the time and the placement are possibly not ideal."

Aircel's Ken Campbell told CBG, "It has been mentioned on occasion at trade shows that a store only wants to reorder four or five of a book. I can see where, if a distributor doesn't have it in his inventory, he would hesitate to call us up to order five of something. He doesn't necessarily want to pick up a hundred — to make it a reasonable order. As a result, the order kind of dies on the vine — or the retailer goes to one of the reorder companies, such as Sunrise, and buys it there."

Aircel's minimum reorder is 25 for a distributor — "provided we can ship it with the next book that's being shipped. We aren't going to stop our whole process to ship out 25 books.

"We just ran a full-page ad in the June 19 CBG; that was our attempt to overcome the problem. We filled out the ad in such a way that retailers can use the bottom of the ad as an order form and send it to the distributor. Everybody is then very aware of what products we do have available.

"In defense of the distributors, they're looking at a huge glut of publishers' product, and I'm sure, in order to operate efficiently and profitably, they have to spend 99% of their time handling the books the first time around. I can't see where it would be terribly profitable for them to go back and start messing around with five books. Unless their system is designed to handle it, I'm sure everything stops while they handle these few books.

"If they're waiting for an order of 100 and they've got 90, they could be sitting on back orders for six months. By the time they get 100 orders, the first 50 don't want the book any more.

"Distributors don't want to get stuck with them; I'm sure that's always a problem. With what the market has been going through, I'm sure they're very cautious these days."

Apple Press' Mike Catron said, "I think my position parallels a lot of these people. We certainly have back stock available. I've had people telling me they couldn't get hold of some of my back stock when I knew it was available.

"I was in one store and a retailer showed me a copy of Elf-Quest: Siege at Blue Mountain #1. It was in a plastic bag and up on his wall and had a $5 pricetag on it.

"I said, 'Gee, I've got about 5000 of those waiting to be sold.' He looked at me and said, 'Oh, really?' I said, 'Yeah,' and he said, 'OK,' and he marked it back down to $1.75 and ordered 50 on the spot."

Apple — which also handles WaRP titles — has a minimum distributor reorder of 25 copies, "combined."

"Any recognized distributor who does business with me can order an assortment, as longs as it totals 25.

"It's very easy to reorder from us," Catron said and laughed. "Not that anyone does."

He said the dilemma cheats the comic-book industry in two ways: "If there's an artificial shortage of back issues, it forces the comic-book reader to pay unwarranted higher prices for back issues. In the longer term, because the creators aren't getting the steady income from back-issue sales, it reduces their pay and causes them to look around for other assignments.

"It's extremely frustrating to be in the middle of all this and see, on the one hand, people paying more than they should for back issues and, on the other hand, creators earning less than they should."

He said, "Since the current trend in the industry seems to be ordering only what you can sell, I would think distributors would want to keep the back issues coming in. They open a box; it doesn't matter to them if it's a current issue or one that was done six months ago.

"I think distributors are going to lose sales as a result. I'm about at the end of my rope as far as this goes, and I'm about to consider opening a reorder shop for anybody who wants. One of the problems we face is the problems the distributors have gone through in the past six or eight months. That's forced them in many cases to put on blinders and just look at the current month's list and let everything else fall by the wayside."

Catron commented from the perspective of having worked for a newsstand distributor, "One of the things that people lament a lot is that comic-book sales aren't as high as they used to be, and they talk about the heyday of the '40s and '50s. I used to work for Dell Distributing. Dell had in the '40s and '50s something like a 90% sell-through of most of its comic books, most of the time.

"The reason it had this is it paid attention to what it was doing. It had guys go out who would take books from the racks in stores in neighborhoods where they weren't selling and move them around to racks in neighborhoods where they were selling. They did all this without computers — manually. If this system worked as efficiently as it did in the '40s and '50s, today — with all the computers that we have — there's not much reason that we couldn't put together a

The elements in Ultra Klutz are as complex as they are absurd. They include pathos, intrigue, and yes, humor. Parody is a frequent element, but it is not dominant; originality is a heavy element.

Ultra Klutz is also periodic. Monthly since issue #2. Issue #13 ships in July. Count the number of black and white titles with issue numbers as high. Only one hand is required.

more efficient system.

"I have my own problems and don't make excuses for them. The solutions are there; it's a matter of our finding ways to apply them. I know I'm not alone in looking for ways to get information out quicker and orders in quicker.

"I'm not one of those people who wants to become a distributor. I have done it. I don't like it, and I don't want to do it. But, faced with the prospect of being run out of business or becoming a distributor, I would become a distributor."

CBG talked with Capital City Distribution's Milton Griepp about the problem. Capital City supplied CBG with the commentary that accompanies this article. In addition, Griepp said, "There's a lot of misunderstanding out there about what the mechanics are of reorders and how available they should be.

"One of our main points is that we don't think any distributor makes money on reorders, and we've been doing an analysis of our costs that shows we lose a substantial amount of money on every reorder we fill.

"We fill reorders to provide a service to our customers, but there are limits to what we can do. In the commentary we've tried to explain what those limits are and to offer constructive suggestions towards working together to resolve some of these joint concerns — because we want the availability, because availability breeds continued consumer interest. That's the key to expanding the over-all market.

"There's a limit to what we can do financially, but I think there are some ways we can work together to make it work better. It's not working as well as it could now.

"The current system deserves more attention to see if it can be improved first, because it works so well on new items that there's no reason to abandon it on reorders of old ones."

Capital City responds to publishers' 'dilemma'

By John Davis & Milton Griepp

Capital City has two main areas of comment on the current controversy. These areas are the situation as it exists and recommendations for improving it.

The first point to be made about the situation as it exists is that distributors in general and Capital City specifically fill a tremendous number of reorders at tremendous expense. Recent articles in CBG have described the incredible flood of reorder activity that has taken place just since the beginning of this year. Capital City places hundreds of reorders to publishers every month, and fills many thousands of reorders to our customers.

The cost of this service is staggering. In the case of Capital City, we have, over the past six months, been working on an analysis of our costs of handling reorders and back-list merchandise. We have discovered that a minimum of 35% of our company-wide labor expense is associated with filling reorders and carrying back-list. These areas are only 10-15% of our sales. Reorders and back-list expenses probably make up an even higher percentage of the total in areas like rent. We estimate that our expenses to fill reorders and back-list orders are at least twice what they are to fill a new comic order.

We have, as a result, been attempting to reduce the number of back-list items we carry by selling them at liquidation prices. This process will continue.

Beyond the expenses like wages, rent, fixtures, and so on that make it very expensive to handle reorders, there is the cost of the product that doesn't sell. Working on normal margins — buying at 60% off and selling at 50% off, we need to sell four copies to have enough gross (and we emphasize gross) profit to pay for every one copy that doesn't sell. We liquidate products that don't sell at a tremendous loss because the demand just isn't there. In the case of Eclipse color books (not including b/w's) in our current liquidation list, we are selling these books, for which we paid 60% off retail, at the equivalent of 90% off retail. Despite the size of the loss we are taking at selling them at this price, the number of Eclipse titles on the Liquidation List has remained relatively stable over the last six months. If there is tremendous unfilled demand on these books, we have yet to find it.

In summary, then, we take a loss almost every time we sell a reorder or a back-list order, not only because our expenses are higher on those types of orders, but from the risk we take on ordering for reorders, and what it takes to cover that risk. Financially, Capital City would be better off not to try to fill any reorders or back-list orders. But that's not what we do.

We over-order with the intention of being able to fill any normal level of immediate reorder activity. We have developed an elaborate computer system to track reorder activity and recommend our overorders by title and issue based on the most current information we have available. We are developing further software to handle the period from when a book is initially ordered from the publisher to six weeks after release, when most reorder activity takes place.

Currently, after the book comes in, if there is surprisingly high or sustained demand, we reorder from the publishers. We also stock key back-list items on an ongoing basis. For example, we couldn't begin to count the number of times we have restocked on Maus. But these are services we do to strengthen our accounts and strengthen our relationship with them. We do not make money on reorders, we provide them as a service!

The question of communications about what is out of stock and what is out of print has been one that has been discussed for years throughout the industry. A point to be made here is that the quality of information at all levels is not as good and will not be as good on reorders as it is on new product. For example, we can tell you today, on a Monday, what the new titles shipping out of Ronalds will be this week. When we tell you that, we have an almost 100% certainity of being accurate in our information.

A reorder, on the other hand, has several places where information can break down from the time it leaves a retailer to the time the product is actually in the retailer's hands. The order must be reordered and combined with others to meet dropship minimums at the distributor's level. Then the reorder goes to a publisher, who can delay or make an error in reordering it or transmitting it to the printer.

At the printer level, a person has to process the incoming reorder and send it to be picked. In the back-stock area of a printer an order-puller has to find the books in the proper quantity, label them correctly, and arrange for transportation to a distributor. All of these processes are out of the normal realm of ordering, printing, and shipping new product. As a result they are not handled as efficiently and there is greater likelihood of problems.

At any stage of the reorder process, if the information breaks down, it can be interpreted as meaning the book is out of print instead of out of stock. A retailer may assume, because his distributor told him he was unable to get his reorder that week, that the book was out of print. A distributor branch manager may assume, because his reorder placed with a publisher did not come through with that week's books (but was instead delayed by some problem), that the book is out of print. And so on.

The point is that we make the best effort we can to be honest and forthright about what the situation surrounding any reorder may be, but we operate under tremendous practical constraints.

The second broad area that needs to be addressed is the question of what can be done to improve availability of reorders, given the constraints that distributors must operate under in order to be financially healthy. We are taking as "givens" that all concerned industry elements want maximum reorder availability through a financially healthy system.

Capital City's first recommendation is that publishers stand behind their product and work with distributors to keep the product pipelines greased. Shipping late product without resolicitation, shipping product that arrives with different prices than originally solicited for, and shipping product with different contents than what was solicited all clog the pipelines.

Retailers and distributors who are sitting on a product because of bad publishing practices are less likely to reorder product from those same publishers. One of the publishers who reportedly has the biggest beef with distributors is guilty of all of these practices. Some publishers are more responsive, and we publicly laud the ones that are.

Beyond the problems with the original solicitation, publishers could stand behind their product by offering an exchange program, whereby we could exchange back-list that we were overstocked on for back-list that we needed. This would be a non-cash transaction that would help everyone liquefy inventories.

Second, some publishers have stated that they are willing to spend more money to move back-list by hiring their own field reps. If they are willing to spend money to move back-list, why not offer distributors increased discounts after the first two weeks a product is on sale to help us cover the tremendous costs and risks that are associated with bringing in a reorder at that time?

This would be working through their existing system of distribution, the path that offers the highest likelihood of success. Why try to develop a totally new system of stocking back-list when there is already a system in place that only needs some attention and resources to improve?

We're challenging publishers here to work with us to solve the problem of reorders, which is an important one if we are to expand the market. One of the key aspects of the direct market compared to the newsstand has been that availability through direct outlets is far superior to the availability through outlets serviced through IDs. This builds consumer trade.

We have done a very efficient job of making new products more available, and also devote considerable resources to reorders and back-list. If publishers are really interested in expanding their markets through greater availability of reorders, they should be working with us, not against us.

COMICS BUSINESS

To get your free copies of the comic industry's business journal!

At Comics Business we support distributors attempts to keep overhead low, themselves profitable, and the direct-sales market running smoothly. For this reason we would like to send any prfessional interested, FREE COPIES of Comics Business. Send us your name and address and we'll be happy to add your name, or store, or business, to our preliminary free subscription list. With enough retailers responding to this free offer, Comics Business can relieve the distributors of the burden of helping get the industry's first business journal to the comics community. This offer good for industry professionals, retailers, distributors, creators, publisher, specialty supplier, etc.

Any professional added to the Comics Business prelimary free subscription list will receive at least two out of every three issues through issue #10. Yes, you will miss an occasional issue, the only way to guarantee that you get every issue is to subscribe for the incredibly low price of $11.95 for 12 monthly issues. We believe that distributing business information to all sectors of the comics industry is essential to achieving the goal of increased market growth. If you support these goals, please subscribe and get Comics Business sent to your mailbox every month.

Send to: Comics Business, PO Box 3185, Thousand Oaks, CA, 91359

☐ Add my name to the list of priliminary free subscribers. I understand I will be mailed at least two-thirds of yet to be published issues through issue #10

☐ I would like to support the industry and the goals of Comics Business, I've enclosed a check or money order for $11.95 for a one year subscription.

Funnies in the Forties: Part XI

'And now a message from our sponsor'

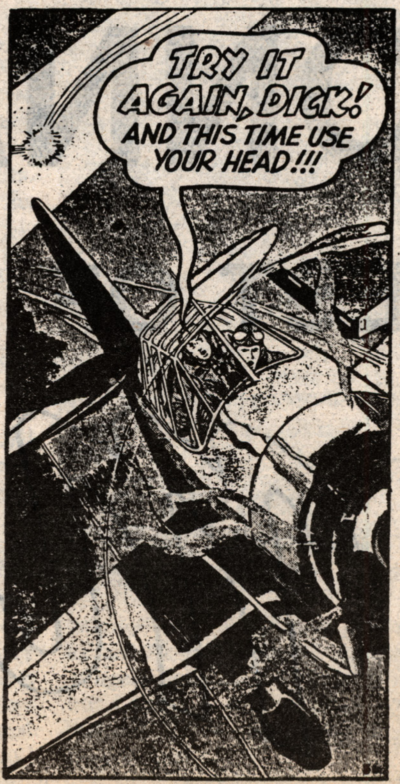
Ron Goulart

Editors' note: This series, which began in the Spring 1985 issue (#7) of Comics Collector and ran in every issue until that magazine's demise with the Winter 1986 issue (#10), has since been running in CBG in its quarterly Price Guide issues.

Despite wartime paper shortages and increasing costs throughout the decade, Sunday comic sections managed to remain relatively fat during the '40s. They had room not only for a wide variety of strips, as we've seen, but for a great many advertisements as well. Since these ads were appearing with the funnies, a considerable percentage utilized the comic-strip format.

Dedicated to selling such necessities as breakfast food, toothpaste, hair tonic, cigarettes, and movies and blessed with fairly large budgets, the ad strips were able to recruit some of the best artists of the day to illuminate their sales pitches. Among those to be found huckstering in the funny papers of the 1940s were Lou Fine, Dik Browne, Noel Sickles, Frank Robbins, and Rube Goldberg.

Advertising funnies were born in the early 1930s, when ad agencies and clients who were struggling through the Depression became willing to experiment with new and cheaper ways of getting their messages to potential customers. Even in those bleak days, advertisers were able to pay well and in the '30s you saw such artists as Albert Dorne, Frank Godwin, Raeburn Van Buren, and Milton Caniff and Noel Sickles drawing commercial strips.



TRY IT AGAIN, DICK! AND THIS TIME USE YOUR HEAD!!!

Teaming under the pen name Paul Arthur, Caniff and Sickles produced a handsome page dealing with Mr. Coffee Nerves, a villainous top-hatted fellow who plagued coffee drinkers who weren't smart enough to switch to Postum. As mentioned in an earlier chapter, this feature was definitely a precursor of such unsponsored comics as Mary Worth and Rex Morgan, M.D.

Advertising agencies were responsible for the content of the ad strips and the scheduling of them, but most of the artwork was done either by freelancers or art services. The most successful producer of this specialized art form was Johnstone & Cushing, a Manhattan-based outfit which had been founded by Thomas A. Johnstone.

A cartoonist and later a comics editor, for both NEA and the New York World, Johnstone set up shop in the early 1930s. He'd also been active on Broadway and had contributed to the book of a Marx Brothers show. Among his employees in the 1940s were Creig Flessel, Gill

Fox, and Dik Browne. The King Features Syndicate also had a hand in some of the ad strips that graced the Sunday funnies and revived some of their former characters to serve as sales persons.

An agency would pay about $750 and up for a Sunday page, making this a lucrative field for cartoonists. Unlike the non-commercial strips, the same ad strips didn't appear each and every week. The most frequent regulars usually showed up about once a month.

A great many of the commercial strips were firmly in the soap opera category. You learned from them that there was no social or psychological problem so dire that it couldn't be remedied by the timely intervention of the right product. Unrequited love, unemployment, loneliness, pain, and depression would all go slinking away like the bested villain in a melodrama once the product was applied or ingested.

Just about the worst social diseases you could have in the '40s, according to the domestic relations ad strips anyway, centered around your teeth. Bad breath, of course, was guaranteed to scare off the opposite sex and even worse was a set of choppers that was dingy and didn't sparkle. Interestingly enough, the two major mouth-trouble artists were disciples of Caniff and Sickles — Frank

WHO SAID KISSING IS FUN?
I ALWAYS THOUGHT IT WOULD BE WONDERFUL TO BE KISSED BY THE BOY I LOVED ... BUT YOU HARDLY EVER KISS ME— AND WHEN YOU DO, IT'S USUALLY JUST A PECK ON THE CHEEK... WHY ?
I CAN'T TELL YOU, HONEY... I DON'T WANT TO HURT YOU!
UM-M-M! IT'S EASY TO SEE WHY DR. LYON'S IS AMERICA'S NUMBER ONE TOOTH POWDER! CLEANS RADIANTLY... AND HAS A COOL, WIDE-AWAKE FLAVOR!

Robbins and Mel Graff. Although both dealt with action and adventure in exciting locales in their regular strips — Robbins was producing Johnny Hazard at the time, Graff Secret Agent X-9 — in their advertising comics they were quite domesticated and stuck to depicting the people, props, and settings appropriate to soap opera situations.

In the years immediately following the conclusion of World War II, Robbins was the prime illustrator of romantic problems of the mouth. An impressive artist even in this context, he drew pages for Kolynos Tooth Paste and for Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, a white, minty stuff that came in a tin shaped something like a hip flask.

The strips featured handsome young men and sexy young women, the latter frequently glimpsed in nothing more than their lingerie. A provocative headline appeared bold in the first dialogue balloon, for example — "What Did You Do To My Daughter?" and "I'd Rather Kiss Ed's Photo — Than Ed!" and "I'm Through With Women!"

What was fouling up the romances of these folks was a malady known as Dental Double Trouble. Ed, whose photo was more lovable than he, was informed by a helpful female chum, "Here's what Ruth told me! I'm afraid you've got Dental Double Trouble!" The handsome blond fellow exclaims, "Me!!?? Bad breath and tainted teeth!!?? Gosh, I'd never have suspected it!" Fortunately, "there's nothing like Kolynos to freshen breath and brighten teeth!"

The final panel always provided a clinch, with the recovered double-trouble victim thinking such thoughts as, "Now she's mine for keeps — thanks to Kolynos!"

Robbins also turned out similar pages for Dr. Lyon's, which promised to improve your social life by making your teeth "doubly clean." Graff took over the Dr. Lyon's account in the late 1940s, contributing pages with such romantic settings as a ski resort and a dude ranch.

Colgate, which called its product dental cream rather than tooth paste, had a blighted-romance format, too. A timely visit to a dentist was enough to save the day — "To combat bad breath, I recommend Colgate Dental Cream! For scientific tests prove that in 7 out of 10 cases, Colgate's instantly stops bad breath that originates in the mouth!" Every dentist, whether consulted by a distraught Tom or a tearful Sis, spouted that identical copy.

Another remedy for non-kissability was offered in the Listerine ad strips. Therein an intrusive little moppet named Miss Fixit offered helpful hints in verse — "Your clothes are cute, your manners gay, but your breath offends, I regret to say."

Older romantics, with whom I didn't then identify, had yet another stumbling block on the road to love. Fortunately, frequently soaking your dental plate in Polident took care of the dreaded "Denture Breath."

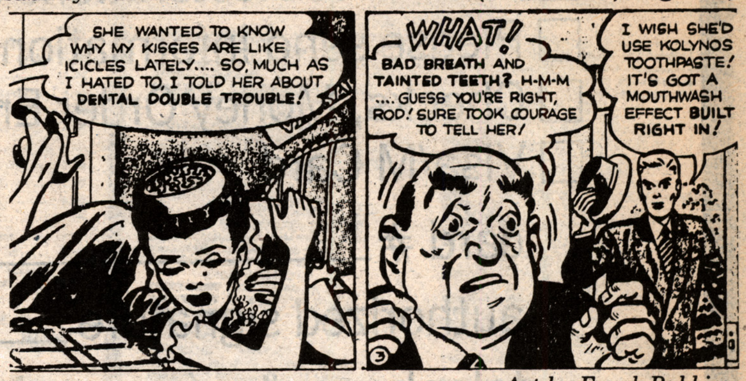
Even those beauties who had a faultless dental situation might yet be whispered about. As another ad strip pointed out — anybody can be stricken with B.O., also known as Body Odor. Lifebuoy, thank goodness, could take care of that and at Mary Jane's next party you'd find youself dancing with all the handsome eligibles.

However, you could smell good and still foul up. To guarantee "the skin you love to touch" it was essential to use Woodbury Facial Soap. I assume that, in those gentler days, suitors only touched their lady friends on or about the face and so the rest of the body didn't need to be "bright-satin alluring."

Creig Flessel, one of the stars of Johnstone & Cushing and a graduate of such comic-book features as "Sandman" and "The Shining Knight," drew an ad page about another problem that could cause domestic grief. Say, for example, the boss and his wife are scheduled to come to dinner and your wife awakens that morning feeling "too miserable to entertain." She complains, "I'm headachy . . . feel dull and logy . . . because I need a laxative. My stomach's sour, too." The answer to that is sparking Sal Hepatica. Later, after the guests have departed, the husband chortles, "Darling, dinner was a howling success! I'll probably get a nice raise!"

Many other domestic problems showed up in the ad funnies, often personified by a nasty recurring villain. One of the most colorful was Peter Pain. A small, green-skinned fellow with a stubbly jaw and a jaunty

(FUNNIES, Page 58)



SHE WANTED TO KNOW WHY MY KISSES ARE LIKE ICICLES LATELY.... SO, MUCH AS I HATED TO, I TOLD HER ABOUT DENTAL DOUBLE TROUBLE!
WHAT! BAD BREATH AND TAINTED TEETH? H-M-M .... GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT, ROD! SURE TOOK COURAGE TO TELL HER!
I WISH SHE'D USE KOLYNOS TOOTHPASTE! IT'S GOT A MOUTHWASH EFFECT BUILT RIGHT IN!

derby, he plagued people who physically overextended themselves. If Grandad shoveled snow too vigorously or Grandma went gift shopping in the chilling rain, Peter Pain struck and thus seemingly spoiled their plans to attend that christening or that wedding. Ah, but there was Ben-Gay — "the original balm analgesique." A speedy application and symptoms all but vanished. The artist on this long-running strip was Jack Betts, who devoted himself almost exclusively to advertising.

Another distinguished villain was Mr. Coffee Nerves. Created in the early '30s by Albert Dorne, carried on by Caniff and Sickles, he returned in the postwar years. He was dressed now like a comic-book super-hero and drawn by the gifted Lou Fine. But, down deep, he was the same invisible heckler he'd always been. Urging Grouchy Granny to tell her loving relatives — "You don't love me! You're just interested in my money!" — and gloating while a caffein-susceptible boss tells off a young employee — "I don't care if you have a new baby .. I'm not giving any raises! Understand?" What these unfortunates, and many another like them, were suffering from was coffee nerves. Once someone convinced them they ought to switch to Postum — "made from healthful wheat and bran" — it was all up with Mr. Coffee Nerves. He'd go slinking off, muttering to himself, "Foiled again by Postum!"

Lou Fine was the most frequently seen ad strip artist of the post-war '40s. An alumnus of the Eisner-Iger comic book shop and a specialist in drawing larger-than-life super-heroes in an impressive bravura manner, Fine decided to abandon the likes of The Black Condor, The Ray and the more down-to-Earth Spirit. He moved into the advertising field after having developed a very effective and individual realistic style. After a stint with Johnstone & Cushing, he went out on his own. Teaming with Don Komisarow, who served as both inker and sales rep, he drew soap opera and adventure for a wide range of clients.

One of his most interesting adventure strips was that devoted to the selling of Wildroot Cream-Oil Hair Tonic. The non-alcoholic tonic, which contained "soothing lanolin" (nobody mentioned that lanolin was merely fat extracted from sheep's wool), was sponsoring the successful Adventures of Sam Spade radio show. Howard Duff starred as Dashiell Hammett's detective. The Sunday ad strip featured Spade, and his pretty secretary Effie, in action-packed cases that managed to get in several plugs for the product.

Fine did an impressive job and it's too bad he never got a chance to do a Sam Spade strip of a less commercial bent. Movies were also advertised in the comic sections and Fine and his partner did quite a few strips promoting such RKO action epics as Tycoon with John Wayne, The Big Steal with Robert Mitchum, and Nocturne with George Raft.

In those days, when relatively few people suspected that cigarette smoking was hazardous to your health, the tobacco industry was free to advertise anywhere it pleased. One of its favorite places was the pages of the Sunday funnies. Fine's cigarette account was Philip Morris. Starred in his pages was Johnny, the red-coated bellhop who

Crossover Sales = $$$

If you sell comics, books, or hobby supplies, the game market may mean important increased sales. The largest growth for adventure gaming is the comic industry. Many comic stores are finding that games can be a very valuable crossover market.

Steve Jackson Games produces many best-selling and award-winning games. Car Wars, GURPS - the Generic Universal RolePlaying System, Illuminati, Ogre and Toon are just a few of the many great games we manufacture.

Interested? Call Sharleen at (512) 447-7866.

Car Wars, GURPS, Illuminati, Ogre and Toon are registered trademarks of Steve Jackson Games. All rights reserved.

served as the company's mascot and was heard delivering the famous line, "Call for Philip Morris," on all its radio and television shows.

Almost every strip was built around an adventure situation, one where handsome, healthy people were seen in action — hunting, flying planes, riding horses. Johnny would pop in to advise them to switch to his brand. The blight the unconverted suffered from was known as cigarette hangover. Among the symptoms were a throat that felt dry and parched, a mouth that tasted musty and a tendency to be irritable. The cure was simple, all you had to do was start smoking Philip Morris, "the one, the only leading cigarette recognized by eminent nose and throat specialists as definitely less irritating." Notice that it doesn't claim not to be irritating, but only less so than the competition.

The R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company was also fond of the comic strip as an advertising medium. Both Camel cigarettes and Prince Albert Tobacco — then tinned tobacco was used not only by pipe smokers but by those who rolled their own cigarettes — were frequently seen in the funny papers.

Looking back at this stuff, what's impressive is the fact that most of the ads were designed to convince you of how healthful smoking was. As long, that is, as you made certain to puff the right brand. The Camels strips, drawn by a variety of artists, devoted years to showing real-life people performing impressive physical feats, then confiding that they owed a great deal to their favorite cigarette. Could it be that the giant tobacco companies knew even then what the truth was? Was all this four-color propaganda meant to immunize consumers against the inevitable later assaults from the Surgeon General and anti-smoking groups?

Adventure was a staple of many another advertising strip. Vaseline Hair Tonic offered a pair of international adventurers named Rusty and Dusty, drawn by Stan Drake. Quaker Puffed Rice showcased movie cowboys such as Monte Hale, Joel McCrea, and Will Bill Elliott. Gillette Blades ran a series that lasted throughout the decade and always found one more way to mix action and shaving. The artwork was very good, but the name of the artist remains a secret known only to some long-retired art director.

Humor was also to be found in the advertising funnies. Many of the lighter strips went in for adventure, too, but of a mock-heroic kind. Pepsi-Cola, then offering 12 full ounces for just a nickel, sponsored Pepsi and Pete. This starred a pair of comedy cops, one tall and fat and the other short and fat. Just as Popeye was buoyed up by spinach, these two were inspired to feats of daring by guzzling soda pop — "Uncap two Pepsi-Colas and then action!" Thus reinforced, they rescued maidens from going over the falls, caught bank robbers, saved explorers from cannibals, and cracked down on Japanese spies.

The two soda pop coppers had been created in the late 1930s by Stan Randall. In the 1940s the police procedures were drawn by a succession of then-well-known cartoonists. Randall led off the decade, followed by veteran strip artist Rube Goldberg and then such as Mal Eaton, Kin Platt, and Jack Markow.

Another mock hero was Roger Wilco, a handsome blockhead who preferred Powerhouse Candy Bars to lovely ladies — "Fudge, caramel, and peanuts — covered with delicious milk chocolate! Boy, you can't beat that fer good eatin'!"

The copy, when it wasn't extolling the product, was thick with the sort of setting-inspired puns that might even have made the Golden Age Batman and Robin wince. When Roger rescues the daughter of a lumber tycoon, for example, she offers, "Daddy has a big saw-mill. Be mine and he'll give us free board." To which Roger replies, "Wood you excuse me, miss? I'll just lumber up to a dee-luscious Powerhouse candy bar."

A similar proposition from the daughter of a photo album factory owner brings forth the reply, "I hate to be 'negative,' ma'am, but I'd rather 'focus' on a dee-luscious Powerhouse candy bar." And so it went.

While these Roger Wilco pages never earned a place in any advertising hall of fame, they do mark an important debut. The young cartoonist responsible for them, just out of the Army and newly installed at Johnstone & Cushing, was Dik Browne. He already possessed a simple, uncluttered, and appealing style, one that made his work stand out. He kept up a successful advertising career until Hi and Lois took off in the middle 1950s.

Eventually a legend at J&C, both for his drawing and his bouts of absent mindedness, Browne began his career there in typical Browne fashion. When he arrived for a job interview Johnstone was playing the piano, Browne explained in a Nemo interview — "In his office, very loud and very badly." When a secretary announced Browne," he said, 'Can he play the piano?' She leaned out the door and said, 'Can you play the piano?' I said no, and he told me physically what I could do with myself, so I got up and I started to walk out. And a nice man named Jack Cushing, his partner, followed me out and said: 'Hey, wait a minute. Don't pay any attention to him. Where are your samples?' And I said I don't have any and I began the whole thing again." Browne was hired anyway and went on to produce numerous advertising strips.

Paul Fung had worked on several regular strips for King Features, including Gus & Gussie and Dumb Dora, and had also

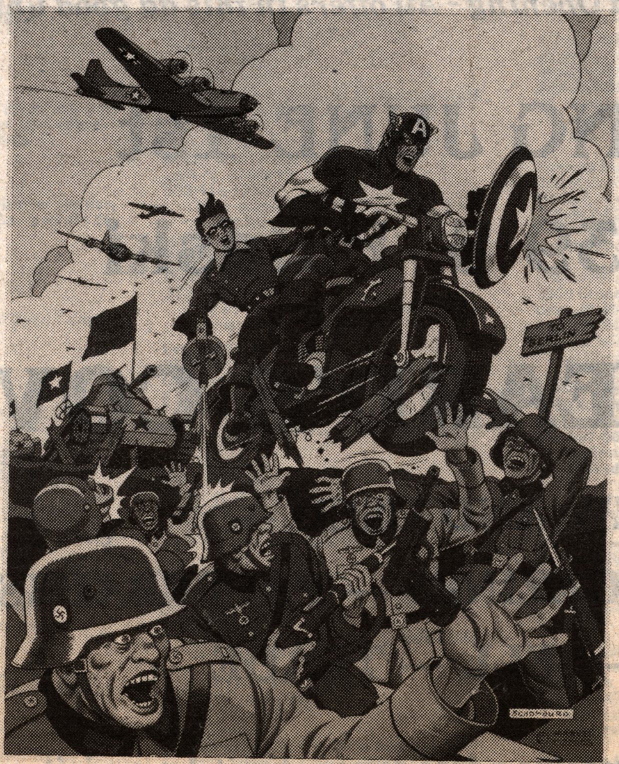
A NEW, ORIGINAL PAINTING BY

ALEX SCHOMBURG



Here is another exciting original masterpiece from the greatest living comicbook cover artist of the Golden Age. As chief cover artist for Timely Comics, Alex Schomburg created many of the most dynamic and colorful covers of the 1940's for such immortal titles as CAPTAIN AMERICA, MARVEL MYSTERY, ALL WINNERS, THE HUMAN TORCH, SUB-MARINER and ALL SELECT.

Now Mr. Schomburg has recreated his cover for CAPTAIN AMERICA #27, an outstanding tempera painting which captures and enhances the brilliance of the cover he originally drew in 1943 featuring Captain America and Bucky leading the combined forces of Russia and America against the Nazi army. As this superb painting aptly shows, Mr. Schomburg's enormous talent and dedication to his work remain as strong as ever. At age 81 he still devotes 100 percent of his artistic energy to the creation of refined and powerful paintings which recapture all the color and vitality of the 1940s.

AND IN THE SAME ISSUE, YOU'LL FIND OTHER OUTSTANDING ORIGINALS LIKE THESE:

*Pencil animation drawing of the Sorcerer from Walt Disney's FANTASIA (1940)
* Pencil background drawing of interior of Stromboli's wagon from Walt Disney's PINOCCHIO (1940)
* Pastel storyboard from "Ave Maria" sequence of FANTASIA (1940)
* Full-color watercolor painting by MIKE PLOOG, 1974
* Full-color animation cel of Snow White from Walt Disney's SNOW WHITE & THE SEVEN DWARFS (1937)
* Handsome full-color cel of Perdita from Disney's 101 DALMATIONS (1961)
* 3 full-color cels of Mowgli & 4 vultures from Disney's JUNGLE BOOK (1967)
* Lively full-color cel of Pluto from Disney Mickey Mouse cartoon, SOCIETY DOG SHOW (1939)
* Colored pencil animation drawing of Grumpy from SNOW WHITE (1937)
* PAUL TERRY STUDIO background paintings from various cartoons, 1938-50
* A variety of newspaper comic-strip SUNDAY and DAILY STRIPS
* Paperback book COVER PAINTINGS

AND MUCH MORE!

assisted on and/or ghosted Barney Google and Polly & Her Pals. In the early 1940s he drew humor features for DC comic books. From the late 1930s on he was responsible for a great many advertising strips, drawn in his strong and likeable cartoon style.

One of his specialities was pretty girls and so he was the logical choice for the revived Dumb Dora. The strip, created in the 1920s by Chic Young, was licensed in the early 1940s and used to sell a cereal called Shredded Ralston (today it's known as Wheat Chex). Comics historians aren't aware of this phase of Dora's career and thus remain unaware that she eventually married her old beau, Rod, and became the mother of a son. The whole family was enamored of Shredded Ralston — "a wonderful, new, whole wheat cereal that helps build strong muscles. And the flavor's simply fascinating!"

The advertising strips, and there were hundreds of others we haven't even mentioned, thrived throughout the '40s. They did well in the next decade, too, and then began to dwindle. With the later shrinking of the comic sections, they all but vanished.

Spellbound

Marvel schedules a bi-weekly

By Maggie Thompson

"We've just scheduled our first bi-weekly publication, tentatively titled Spellbound," Marvel Direct Sales Manager Carol Kalish told CBG in a phone interview.

Spellbound's writer, Louise Simonson, told CBG, "One of the things the editorial change at Marvel has meant is that a comic book that has been sitting in my drawer for almost six years is going to be released suddenly."

She laughed and said, "This comic was done so long ago that the original title was Transformers. And then they came out with the toys.

"It's quite a beautiful comic, and Marvel will be releasing it in a special format soon. The first four issues are complete; the fifth is being inked. The sixth issue has to be scripted, and I'm the only one who held that up so long. Because I thought it was never going to be printed, I figured why bother?

"Now I'd better get my act together and get it written."

Pencils are by Terry Shoemaker, and inks are by Carl Potts. The first issue will ship Sept. 22, and it is on the order form at the printer now. It will be a $1.50 Baxter title, 32 pages with ads. It will run for six issues, and #6 will be a 48-page comic book with ads and sell for $2.25. All six issues have been pencilled.

Kalish said, "Spellbound is definitely scheduled. Terry is an extraordinarily fine penciller, but one thing we didn't want to do was rush him. We thought that, when you have a penciller this good, the last thing you want to do is force him to operate on a schedule so that he gets rushed and the pencils start to lose that vibrant quality.

"I use the analogy of how we worked with Art Adams on his first project, Longshot, which was a long time in the making and — I think as far as the market was concerned — well worth the wait.

"I think the Terry Shoemaker pencils on Spellbound are just as worthy of the long wait, whether or not the marketplace knew it was waiting for them.

"We knew we were waiting for them with bated breath, because they just look tremendous.

"We will be sending out lots and lots of copies — probably the entire first issue — to the direct market shortly, just so retailers will be able to go to warehouses or talk to their distributors about Spellbound."

Aaaargh! increases discounts, will produce limited hardcovers

"Aaaargh! has increased its maximum discount to the industry's standard discount for comics," said Rick Shanklin, the company's market director. "We had originally planned to offer a lower discount on our summer titles (Prince Nightmare, Baseball's Superstars, Assassin, and Risky Dick) because of our full-color, 64-page, squarebound format, but increased pressure from distributors attending the Diamond trade show in Orlando caused us to re-evaluate our decision.

"After talking to Walter Wang, Bill Schanes, Chuck Rozanski, Bud Plant, and Sharon Farris, we decided to offer what amounts to the industry standard. At that time, our discount carried a qualifying minimum-order requirement that we have since realized was too high for many distributors to achieve. Last month, a letter was sent to each of our distributors notifying them that we would be offering the same discount as other major comic companies."

"Unfortunately," said Director of Publications Mark Wheatley, "either many of them didn't receive — or read — the letter, or they chose to offer a lower discount to their accounts! We want every retailer to know that the maximum discount is available to distributors, and they should contact their distributor if this is not being passed along to them."

Aaaargh!'s maximum discount is being offered to those distributors who will accept orders C.O.D. "This isn't really as bad as it sounds," said Shanklin, "since a number of our distributors are on C.O.D. anyway. I regret the inconvenience this may pose to a few of them, but publishers really have their backs against the wall these days.

"All we're trying to accomplish here is to let retailers know that our books will ship in June and July (on time!), the maximum discount they normally enjoy is available from our distributors, and reorders will be available from many of our distributors. Should reorders not be obtainable locally, we will work with retailers to see that they get copies of our books to sell — quickly!"

Reorders are still available on The Crypt #1, and several hundred copies of the special edition are also available.

"There will be a hardcover edition of each of Aaaargh!'s summer releases, also!" said George Kochell, who heads the production department. "Since our books are actually comic-sized full-color graphic novels (64 pages), we're going to bind a limited number of each of our first issues in a permanent edition. These will be signed and numbered by the writer and artist on each book, and will be limited to fewer than a thousand of each. The binding will be similar to that used on the hardcover edition of the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide.

"We are offering this edition to any distributor who orders copies of the normal edition of each title, and copies will be allotted according to initial orders. Although we have not set the price yet, I belive it will be $19.95. So far, only Alternate Realities has solicited for this item on their order forms, so it might be a good idea to call your distributor and see if he's ordering the hardcover edition."

Price Guide analysis: DC is the one to watch

By Cliff Biggers

After the hectic nature of last summer's price swings, this spring seems tame. There are some predictable "hot" titles, but most of them are titles from major publishers (Flash, Justice League, The 'Nam, Punisher, etc.); very few independents have become "hot" thus far this year, and even those that have caught on with a readership aren't seeing the sort of price escalation last summer's roller-coaster pricing gave us.

> 'I ordered more of Green Arrow than I ever expected to sell. I sold out in a week!'

If there's any company which seems to have caught the fancy of comics speculators, it is DC, which has had phenomenal sales success with first issues since Dark Knight #1, with several books becoming hot sellers and several others selling briskly enough to warrant further attention.

Most retailers across the country report that DC is the company that their customers are most interested in — perhaps the Dark Knight phenomenon, followed up by the sell-outs on Justice League #1 and Flash #1 and the success of the Batman, Superman, and Wonder Woman renovations, is responsible for this.

It's hard to find anyone out there who has a bad word for DC right now; DC seems to have support from fans, from retailers, and from distributors. Don't expect its upcoming titles to continue as hot; they'll remain very popular, of course, but retailers are keeping an eye on them now, so that means the orders will be higher and the excess demand-to-supply ratio probably won't be there to create future hot sellers.

Then there's Green Arrow: The Longbow Hunters.

No one seemed to expect the sell-out that greeted this book. One retailer said, "After the problems getting more Justice League and Flash #1s, I ordered more of Green Arrow than I ever expected to sell. I decided I'd rather have this one on the stands for six months than sell out. So what happened? I still sold out in a week!" The Prestige Format seems to be a sales winner for DC.

Marvel's success came with two fan-favorite characters: The Punisher and The Silver Surfer. Quality production teams and popular characters equalled huge orders; even so, sales were brisk and prices are already beginning to rise, albeit more slowly. There's a reason for that: So many more copies of these books were printed that more people were able to find copies on the stands at cover price for weeks.

Regionalism still creeps into comic-book pricing. Artists who are hot in one area — generally their home town or home state — may not be so hot elsewhere. Prices vary tremendously on independents; most independents sell better near the places they are produced, and prices tend to escalate in these areas. This sort of pricing is best ignored, since these things tend to even themselves out once locals discover they can order these titles from out-of-town dealers at substantially lower prices.

Cartoon and Japanese animation tie-ins also vary regionally; here, however, it seems that the televising of the show in a given area can have a huge effect on sales. Most areas report dramatic declines in demand for Robotech books, for example, because of the unavailability of the show. This sort of market seems to be most trendy and likely to die off quickly once interest has moved on to something new.

RAT FINK™ IS A TRADEMARK OF ED ROTH! Copyright 1987 by ED ROTH

A publisher's sell-out means that retailers ordered all the copies they could get; there's no indication there that the retailer sold all of them.

PRICES

For the past month, "the Japanese invasion" seems to have hit comics; the popularity of First's Lone Wolf and Cub and its rapid sell-out seems to have led many retailers to expect all Japanese products to do the same. For the most part, sales have been reported as much softer on all the Eclipse International books; while all three are sell-outs from Eclipse, most stores report ample supplies, and virtually no one is reporting above-cover prices.

This sort of "sell-out" can be misleading to many comics readers. Any publisher can have a sell-out instantly if he only prints as many copies as he has orders for. A publisher can create excess demand by printing only a percentage of his orders. This is not what Eclipse did with these Japanese books, of course; as a reputable publisher, Eclipse printed enough copies to cover all its orders plus a set percentage overprinting to supply reorders. After Lone Wolf and Cub sold so well, however, retailers turned in large reorders, and all the extra copies Eclipse had printed were sold out. Thus, we have a sell-out title.

So what's misleading? Simply this: What's a sell-out to the publisher may be far from it for the retailer. A publisher's sell-out means that retailers ordered all the copies they could get; there's no indication there that they sold all of them.

Eclipse had correctly announced a sell-out on Mai the Psychic Girl and Area 88 days before most of the East Coast had copies of the books; this sort of sell-out has no effect at all on prices, however, unless it is followed with heavy retail sales that result in further demand for the book. Thus far, this hasn't happened with the Eclipse titles to the degree that it happened with Lone Wolf and Cub.

Another regional factor affecting prices is the availability of the book. Albedo has such expensive early issues because they weren't nationally available; if someone on the East Coast wants the book, he has to pay more because East Coast retailers are having to buy copies from West Coast retailers to get them. As more publishers enter the field, there are going to be some which hook up with only one or two distributors, and thus don't get full national distribution. Watch for this to have an effect.

Many retailers pointed out several changes in the market in the past few months. First, the mini-series seems to be less popular than it once was; retailers are reporting less interest in mini-series than in ongoing series. Back-issue sales on most mini-series are very, very sluggish, and prices aren't rising very much at all once the series is completed. The mini-series within a series format (as seen in Detective, Batman, Daredevil, and the Spider-Man titles recently) is generating even less interest from most back-issue buyers; without the presence of a #1, the collector's market seems less interested.

As CBG has recently reported, some publishers have complained that books are being reported as sell-outs when, in fact, copies are available; Retief and Concrete #1 were both reported as sell-outs by several distributors at a time when copies were still available, and some retailers — particularly in the South and Midwest — were getting double cover price on the books at a time when wholesale copies were available.

This has happened with major publishers as well; several retailers reported late last year that back-issue sales on History of the DC Universe were steady at $5 an issue — yet copies were still available at wholesale from DC via the distributors. Retailers insist that this isn't an attempt to manipulate a market on their part; instead, they blame the lack of a reliable system of insuring delivery of reorders for this sort of market fluctuation.

Whatever the cause, it benefits a collector to make sure the collectible he's buying is indeed a valuable item, particularly if it's a very new, hot title — it may be that the book is hot only on a regional basis because of distribution problems, reorder problems, etc.

Last June, Dark Knight was the hot book. This June, there is no single hot book which dominates the market. The mutant craze seems to be slowing, with retailers reporting very sluggish sales on X-Men and X-Men-related back issues compared to sales a year or two years ago.

New Universe books are dead as back-issue sellers, and prices reflect it.

The back-issue collectible market is still sluggish. However, the retail market is booming again, and that bodes well for the industry and for collectors; there are more and more retail sales successes, and that's the first pre-requisite for a hot book.

Perhaps, though, the very health of the market is responsible for the slowdown on back-issue sales and the price decline of several formerly hot books. When it costs $697 to buy one copy of each May comics release (see CBG #707), how many avid collectors have any back-issue money left?

AIDS Aid

A one-shot comic book is being prepared in England to raise funds to help people suffering from AIDS (Acquired Immune Defense Syndrome).

Organized by Don Melia and Lionel Gracey-Whitman, creators of the Matt Black comic book which deals with the adventures of a gay super-hero, the 40-page comic, as yet untitled, will have contributions from Alan Moore, Hunt Emerson, Kevin O'Neill, Alan Davis, Posy Simmons, Steve Bell, Cath Jackson, Frank Dickens, Phil Elliott, and others, including the militant gay rock group The Communards.

All proceeds raised by the project will be donated to the London Lighthouse, Britain's first residential and day-care center for people suffering from AIDS. An auction of the original artwork is also planned.

ALTERNATIVE COMICS lets you order comics right now, using the CBG Comics Price Guide, instead of waiting for a catalog. We stock most comics of the past 20 years (inquire for older/rare/expensive), including a solid and near complete selection of independents and directs. We carry over 2,000 titles in our 100,000 inventory so we're likely to have what you want.

TO ORDER, list your choices from the CBG Guide, using its Near Mint prices. Total the prices and include the required postage and handling fee. Payment is check or money order, U.S. funds, no COD or charge cards. Any unused money is refunded in your shipment.

CONDITION OF COMICS we fill orders with Mint to Fine, using highest condition available. Many of our comics are Mint only, though you're only paying for Near Mint. And our Fine (which we rarely have to use) is quite nice. When you combine that with our discounts you're getting a pretty good deal. If we only have the comic in lower than Fine we'll let you know its condition and price before sending or charging for it.

DISCOUNTS: take 10% off orders over $25 (with no single comic costing more than half the total). Take 10% off if you include a list of alternates which totals at least half your order value. You can combine these discounts to save 20%!

EXCEPTIONS: We honor the CBG Comics Guide prices only until the next edition (generally published in March, June, September and December). Our minimum price each is 75¢ or cover price (whichever is higher), even if the Guide price is lower. The only other exceptions are typographical errors (rare), and occasional "hot" comics where the market value rises sharply after the CBG Guide is published. Even on those we can generally offer a better deal than most dealers.

POSTAGE & HANDLING: $1.90 plus 3¢ per comic. Canada: $4.00 for first 30 comics, 12¢ for each additional comic. Other foreign: same as Canadian rate, plus $1.00.

CBG COMICS PRICE GUIDE

PRICE GUIDE INTRODUCTION

Our guide is designed to provide informationon the most current values in the comics world. It has been revamped since it ran three months ago in Comics Buyer's Guide, and we invite retailers active in buying and selling these titles to participate in future guides. No single source can provide a universally acceptable value guide to comics. Retailers' price lists were an information source for this compilation, and special mention must be given to The Comic Book Price Guide by Robert M. Overstreet.

Beginning with major DC and Marvel titles from the mid-'50s, the CBG price guide offers information on the title runs to date. The superhero is the main focus within the hobby, and it is the main focus of this list, which is designed to be both a price guide and an easy-to-use index of current comics.

The prices given here are for near-mint comics. This is the most acceptable and general condition a collector desires for newer comics. A near-mint copy is almost perfect — with almost no signs of wear or aging. There might be one or two tiny defects discernable only on close examination (for example, an extremely slight flaking on the spine).

The condition of comics is a vital factor in determining comics values. The primary conditions used in grading are "poor" (undesirable in most collections), "fair," "good," "fine," and "mint." Other grades, including the "near-mint" we use, are steps between these. A "fair" issue would be worth about 10% of the price we list. A "good" issue would be worth about 20% of our price. A "fine" issue would be worth about 60% of our price. And a "mint" copy would be worth 120% of our price.

TALES FROM THE HEART
TAKE YOUR PASSPORTS YOU CANNOT STAY IN RWANDA. YOUR VISA IS FOR PASS ONLY.

"Excellently written and drawn. Very realistic. I found that I wanted to see what happens next. We really enjoyed it here."
Ralph Griffith
Co-publisher, Arrow Comics

It is a different world, where a multitude of cultures have grown, flourished, languished and died. It is fierce and peaceful; sacred and scarred. And every now and then, I'm reminded that I'm a stranger.

Ad design: Riffraff! Productions

"Very funny. Very charming… with real, identifiable people. I really enjoyed it."
Chas Truog
Artist for Epic's Coyote and Milky Way's Xmen.

"Insightful and engrossing. A fun read that can only be told by someone who lived it."
Dan Jurgens
Artist, writer of DC's Booster Gold

"Remarkably nice change from super heroes…Enjoyable, funny and makes you think. I'll enjoy reading the rest of the series. A wonderful logo."
Greg Guler - Writer, artist of Captain Phil and the Intergalactic Space Pals

"As straightforward as the title suggests, it is a consciousness raising journey and a fine example of 'comics verité.'"
Paul Guinan
Artist, First Comics

"It's a winner…An up and coming book that mixes 'Love and Rockets' with 'Journey.' I'd read it twice a week if I could."
Rip Thornhill
Colorist for First's Corum Series

" 'Tales From the Heart' is an ambitious title for any book; this one lives up to it. If you don't like comics, buy a copy of this book. If you do like comics, buy two. It's that good."
Will Shetterly
Creator, writer of Captain Confederacy and noted fantasy author

CBG Customer Service Award — 1987

'2000 AD Weekly' changes format

The Tenth Anniversary issue of Britain's science-fiction comics weekly, 2000 AD, sees the return of three of the title's most popular stars of the past, a change to the superior web-offset printing process, and an improvement in the paper quality used for the title, in keeping with IPC's commitment to "upgrade" all its comics titles in 1987.

Prog 520 has the return of "Anderson; Psi-Division" by T.B. Grover and Barry Kitson, "Rogue Trooper" by Simon Geller and Steve Dillon, and "Torguemada The God" by Pat Mills and Kevin O'Neill, in which the popular antagonist from the "Nemesis The Warlock" strip gets his own series.

They join headliners "Judge Dredd" by John Wagner, John Grant and various artists, and "Strontium Dog" by Alan Grant and Carlos Ezquerrra. Promised soon is the return of "D.R. And Quinch" by Jamie Delano, Alan Davis, and Mark Farmer.

This special "re-launch" issue has a birthday celebration cover designed by Dave Gibbons and executed by John Higgins.

'Doctor Who Fun Book' out

The last week of May saw the release in Britain of The Doctor Who Fun Book, 64 pages of jokes, puzzles, cartoons, and comic strips by Tim Quinn and Dicky Howett, veteran Who fans from the TV series' first episode in 1963, and creators of the Dr. Wha-? strip for Marvel UK's Doctor Who Magazine as well as many other cartoon features for British comics.

The Doctor Who Fun Book will retail for $1.95 in Britain, and $3.95 in the United States. It should be available in America in mid-June.

'Get Lost' is found

Early 'Mad' imitator to be reprinted from original art

The original artwork from the 1950s comic book series Get Lost has been found, and will be used to republish the three-issue run in its entirety by New Comics Group.

The humor anthology series created by Ross Andru and Mike Esposito originally appeared in 1954. The artwork, missing for years, was discovered by Esposito after several conversations on the subject with New Comics publisher Steve Donnelly.

Donnelly said, "I'm overjoyed! I had fondly remembered the three issues of Get Lost, both from Marvel Comics' use of several of the stories in their 1970s title Arrgh, and in two of the rare original comics that I have in my personal collection.

"The zany approach and irreverant tone they took in tackling their various subjects somehow struck a chord in my own rather strange outlook on life."

Get Lost was one of the first Mad imitations and includes satires on Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer novel, I, the Jury, Flash Gordon, Robin Hood, and The Invisible Man, among others.

It was the first publication, pre-dating even Mad, to do contemporary film parodies. Then-current films, such as John Wayne's Hondo, Alan Ladd's Shane, and James Arness' The Thing were all tackled by the Get Lost staff.

There is even a four-page parody of EC horror, hosted by The Sewer Keeper.

"We have completed negotiations and have purchased all publishing rights, plus the actual artwork itself. Because we have

PRESENTS

THE BIGGIES!

Our major new releases for the year.

Take a look!

We've gone out of our way to find you these hard-to-find titles in the best obtainable quality!

ATTACK OF THE GIANT LEECHES

(1958) Yvette Vickers, Ken Clarke, Bruno Vesota. This has to be one of the more enjoyable low budget sci-fi/horror films ever made. Perfect entertainment for an evening at the drive-in movies. A small town is terrorized by giant, mutant leeches. Yvette Vickers is the ultimate science fiction sex kitten! Try to imagine Bruno Vesota as her husband. No wonder she cheats on him, with his best friend no less. The underground scenes of the leeches slowly sucking life out of their victims tend to make your stomach turn. Thoroughly enjoyable! Vickers' dressing room scene is superb! From 16mm.

FLESH AND THE FIENDS

(1960) Peter Cushing, Donald Pleasance, George Rose. The ultimate horror film about body snatching! The story of Burke and Hare has never been told with such a loathsome, brutal effect. Cushing gives one of the best performances of his career as the cold, calculating Dr. Knox, who will stop at nothing to maintain a steady supply of cadavers for his surgical studies. Donald Pleasance is equally brilliant as Burke, who, along with his sadistic companion, Hare, terrorizes London with a series of grisly murders. Not for the faint hearted! Rival Hammer studios seldom produced anything as good. Shot in black and white and directed by John Gilling. We highly recommend this British shocker! From 16mm.

THE DEVIL'S PARTNER

(1958) Edwin Nelson, Richard Crane, Edgar Buchannon. A genuinely eerie little film with that real 'late 50's' feel to it. Ed Nelson has a dual role as an old man who's sold his soul to the devil and as a young man who uses black magic and witchcraft to win Jean Allison from Richard Crane. This includes having Crane attacked by his own dog which leaves his face hideously scarred. Nelson also has the power to transform into a number of hideous beasts. Set in a southern desert town. If you enjoy gritty little black and white horror films like "Carnival of Souls," you'll certainly enjoy this one. From 35mm.

THE SCREAMING SKULL

(1958) John Hudson, Peggy Webber, Russ Conway. This grisly little American International shocker begins with a closeup of a coffin and a narrator informing you that your funeral expenses will be paid in full should you die of fright while viewing this horrifying film! Like so many of the AIP scare 'em movies of the late 50s, this one also manages to rise above its budgetary limitations. The setting is a gloomy old mansion where a man sets out to drive his wife insane by placing skulls all over the house and then getting her to believe it's the skull of his dead, former wife! The highly supernatural climax is shocking, not to mention grisly. Superb camerawork. From 16mm.

all of the art to shoot from, we will be able to produce the series at a level of quality exceeding the original run, while keeping all the stories, text pieces, and even house ads faithfully intact," Donnelly said.

"We feel the current audience will enjoy the madcap humor and diehard collectors will finally be able to get a copy of these scarce books for only cover price."

The first issue, Donnelly said, was written and drawn by Andru and Espositio, with contributions from now-noted science fiction author Harry Harrison and others.

Trigon ceases publication

Trigon Comics, an independent British comics company which has been in existence for 1½ years, ceased publishing as of May 1987.

When attempts were made to contact Trigon's former publisher, David Ashcroft, to obtain a statement, the office's telephone proved to be disconnected. Ashcroft is therefore unavailable for comment.

The last known issues of Trigon's three titles are Totally Alien #6, Post-Atomic Cyborg Gerbils #2, and Clint #2. Another one-shot title, Watchcats, which failed to appear as advertised in February, will be published by Harrier Comics in June.

2 BONE CHILLING SHOCKERS OF UNBEARABLE HORROR!
Castle of the Living Dead x
CHRISTOPHER LEE
He lured beautiful women to his evil castle and induced them into a state of living death until Infinity!
TERROR-CREATURES FROM THE GRAVE x
BARBARA STEELE
They rise from dank coffins in the DEAD OF NIGHT to inflict AN EVIL CURSE OF DOOM, murdering their victims in an ORGY OF SLAUGHTER!
RELEASED BY TIGON PICTURES LTD.

NIGHTMARE CASTLE
(1965) Barbara Steele, Laurence Clift, Paul Muller. The ultimate film for Barbara Steele lovers. She's seen being lustful, afraid, disfigured, tortured, fainting, passionate, and so on. The camera seems to focus in on her every move in an attempt to exploit her haunting beauty. A woman's ghost seeks revenge on her murdering husband.

CASTLE OF THE LIVING DEAD
(1964) Christopher Lee, Donald Sutherland. For the record, this was Sutherland's first movie. A chilling tale of a group of performers that are invited to a mysterious castle with disastrous results. Lee plays the evil Count Drago. Is his collection of stuffed animals what it appears to be?

VOYAGE TO THE PREHISTORIC PLANET

TERROR CREATURES FROM THE GRAVE
(1965) Barbara Steele, Walter Brandi. An extremely rare Barbara Steele film, not seen in this country since its initial release! Plague infected zombies are summoned from the grave to avenge the death of a man who was murdered by his wife. Steele is gorgeous, as usual.

BRITISH INTELLIGENCE
(1940) Boris Karloff, Margaret Lindsay, Holmes Herbert. Boris as a master spy! Not a horror film but a fast paced spy thriller with Karloff once again as the arch villain. His scarred face looks very grotesque. Margaret Lindsay finds herself in his clutches. Produced by Warner Brothers.

DIABOLICAL DR. Z
(1965) Howard Vernon, Mabel Karr, Estella Blain. When the diabolical doctor keels over from a heart attack, his equally diabolical daughter seeks revenge on the colleagues who spurned him. Some pretty grisly stuff. The opening sequence is a real shocker! Somewhat related to "The Awful Doctor Orloff."

THE LAST WORD IN SHOCK!

GREEN HORNET
(1940) Gordon Jones, Keye Luke, 13 chapter serial, $39.95. This classic Universal serial has been offered by a number of different video companies, but you'll be hard pressed to find it in better quality than we have. From an original 35mm nitrate print. Fast paced thrills based on the comic strip hero.

DEAD EYES OF LONDON
(1961) Klaus Kinski, Andy Berber. A genuinely thrilling remake of Lugosi's "Dark Eyes of London." The head of a home for the blind uses zombie-like creatures to commit a series of murders against the millionaire elite of London. These grisly murders are shown in very explicit detail considering the year this was made.

CRASH OF THE MOONS
(1953) Richard Crane, Sally Mansfield, Scotty Beckett. This is just one of seven Rocky Jones' features we've acquired. They're all great fun with that real 50s' sci-fi feel to them. This one concerns the collision of two wandering moons. Great special effects for its time.

LAST REUNION
(1955) Eric Portman and Michael Gough. An unbelievable ghost story, this rare British gem runs just under an hour, and every minute is a set-up for one of the most chilling, incredible twist endings you'll ever see. Top notch acting.

JUNIOR G-MEN
(1940) Billy Halop, Huntz Hall, 12 chapter serial, $34.95. If you saw our print of "The Lost City," you'll know what quality to expect. From a very nice 16mm original print! The Dead End kids help track down a spy ring that's after a new, powerful explosive. Tons of action.

ESCAPEMENT aka ELECTRONIC MONSTER
(1957) Rod Cameron, Mary Murphy. A mad scientist is experimenting on the patients in his sanitarium with an electronic brain machine. The bizarre dream sequences of sexual and murderous fantasies are extremely well done.

GHOSTLY! GHASTLY!
A CITY OF FEAR BECOMES A CITY OF DEATH!

The ELECTRONIC MONSTER

DRUMS OF JEOPARDY
(1931) Warner Oland, June Collyer, Lloyd Hughes, Mischa Auer. Don't let the title fool you, this is a full blooded, mad doctor on the rampage horror film! Perhaps because this film was produced by Tiffany studios instead of Universal or Warner Brothers explains why it's been almost totally forgotten. Make no mistake though, this has the look and feel of many of the early horror classics. Warner Oland gives the performance of his life as the mad doctor, 'Boris Karlov,' hellbent on revenge against the family who caused the death of his daughter. It makes one wish that Oland had made more horror films. High voltage lab scenes, a spooky mansion on a stormy night, and old mill used for torture and murder, a minor horror masterpiece! From 16mm.

MIDNIGHT FACES
(1926) Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Kathryn McGuire, Jack Perrin. And you thought "The Cat And The Canary" was the granddaddy of all old, dark house horror movies??? Wrong! Here's an extremely rare film made a full year before "Cat" that has every possible device that ever became a cliche in all the countless spook-house movies that followed: clutching hands, secret panels, a monstrous, twisted killer dressed in a black cape and hat, sinister figures peering in windows, even a frightened negro man servant. We're not saying this is a classic, but it certainly has plenty of atmosphere and a story that keeps moving. Some creepy moments. From a gorgeous 16mm print.

WORLD'S FINEST BACKER BOARDS™
DOES QUALITY COUNT?
MY CUSTOMERS MUST THINK SO, I'VE SOLD
OVER 1,000,000! Because my boards are:

1. Laboratory tested to be completely acid-free --never just an acid-free surface.
2. Pure virgin material -- never recycled.
3. All white with one buffered side.
4. 24 mil thick.
5. Designed to fit most bags from major manufacturers.

Passages

This department will attempt to deal with events in our field in concise and timely form. Items to be covered here will include retirement, cancellation of titles, discontinuance of comic strips, and deaths.

Canceled

With #6, The 39 Screams from Thunder Baas Press.

With #1, Varmints from Blue Comet Press.

With #1, Captain Phil and the Intergalactic Space Pals from SteelDragon Press.

With #3, Dark Visions from Pyramid Comics.

With #2, Reign of the Dragonlord from Eternity Comics.

With no issues published, The End from Mighty Pumpkin.

With no issues published, 3 Demons from Ink of the West Publishing.

With no issues published, Rosemary's Amazing Dinners from Chorus Comics.

Delayed

Crimson Dreams #12 (Crimson Productions) has been delayed indefinitely.

The Aleexus of Vertigo and Barbaric Tales from Pyramid Comics have been postponed until later this year.

Misprinted

Warlock 5 #6 from Aircel Comics bears a #5 on the cover; check the indicia for the correct number.

Title changed

Aircel has changed the title of a forthcoming series from The Fury to Bloodline. DC holds a trademark on Fury; a character of that name appears in Young All-Stars and her daughter appears in Infinity, Inc.

SUPERB BIG LITTLE BOOK COLLECTION FOR SALE!!!

I am selling an awesome collection of BLBs and BLB types: BLBs (small, large, Cocomalts), Dell Fast Actions, Saalfields, Evans Five Star Libraries, Wee Little Books, Top Lines, rare premiums, etc. EVERY IMPORTANT TARZAN, BUCK ROGERS, FLASH GORDON, MICKEY MOUSE, DICK TRACY, LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE including all "firsts" and some outrageously scarce titles like MICKEY AND MINNIE AT MACY'S. Overall condition is excellent, quite a number Near-Mint and no garbage whatsoever. To be sold as a collection only, about 475 titles, preferably to someone who would appreciate an almost encyclopedic collection, put together over ten years. No full listing is available but all serious inquiries as to specific contents, by phone or mail, will be respectfully answered. Unlike comics, BLBs have yet to hit their true value status. Their investment potential could easily sky-rocket in the next few years. A collection like this one, including all the great titles in terrific shape, comes along once in a blue moon.

RARE ECs!

EC AUCTION!

After all these years, I've decided I'd rather have the money than these rare EC items. The highest bid received on each item before August 1, 1987, takes it, on the following conditions:

All bids must be in writing, signed, and must include the buyer's complete address.

Cash only; I am not interested in trade. Time payments may be possible on the expensive stuff.

The winning bid must be more than I paid for the item. I bought these quite some time ago, so this shouldn't be a problem on reasonable bids.

I'll be glad to inform interested parties of the amount of the winning bids, if they send SASE. No SASE, no answer.

LUCKY FIGHTS IT THROUGH (VD 821): Copyright 1949 by Columbia University Press, this giveaway about syphilis was Harvey Kurtzman's first work for EC. Four copies are known to exist; this is supposed to be the best of them, but I haven't seen the others firsthand so I can't swear to it. very fine

SHOCK ILLUSTRATED #3 (May 1956): Only 200 copies were produced of this final EC issue; this copy is autographed by Reed Crandall and George Evans, two of the four artists who contributed stories. A unique item. near fine

TALES OF TERROR (ANNUAL) no number (1951): Contains Vault of Horror #12, Weird Science #13 (#2), Crypt of Terror #17, and Tales from the Crypt #20, rebound with new cover; get three EC first issues in one package! good/very good

TALES OF TERROR (ANNUAL) #2 (1952): Contains Vault of Horror #20, Crime SuspenStories #3, Weird Fantasy #17 (#5), and Tales from the Crypt #24. very good

TALES OF TERROR (ANNUAL) #3 (1953): Contains Tales from the Crypt #31, Crime SuspenStories #12, Shock SuspenStories #3, and Vault of Horror #26. very good

TWO-FISTED ANNUAL #1 (1952): Contains Two-Fisted Tales #19 and #22, and Frontline Combat #3 and #4. very good/fine

TWO-FISTED ANNUAL #2 (1953): Contains Two-Fisted Tales #31 and #33, and Frontline Combat #8 and #9. very good/fine

WEIRD SCIENCE-FANTASY (ANNUAL) #1 (1952): Contains Weird Science #11, #12, and #13, and Weird Fantasy #13. very good/fine

WEIRD SCIENCE-FANTASY (ANNUAL) #2 (1953): Contains Weird Science #18 and #19, and Weird Fantasy #17 and #18. very good/fine

All Books NM-M Except Where Noted
Postage $2.50 Plus Or Money Orders Preferred
15% OFF Orders over $100.00

You may ask yourself..."How can you make me a superhero?" Easy! Just answer and return the following questions along with an (optional) photo of yourself plus a $15.00 check or money order and you will become a super hero!

You will receive the 9x10 original hand drawn caricature of yourself in your hero guise. All drawings are done on top quality art paper in pen and ink by our specially trained artists and are tailor made to fit each individual. All heroes are original and one-of-a-kind.

In an in depth report you also find out just what a superhero is and what his responsibilities are. You find out why the world needs heroes.

You also receive a list of your powers and the description of each one. It's up to you to decide what to do with them!

Just send a $15.00 check or money order to: Duology, P.O. Box 2242, Muskogee, OK 74402. (Don't forget to include your name and your return address.)

Questions: (Circle one answer for each question)
1. As a super hero, do you retain a secret identity? Yes No
2. If asked, would you belong to a larger group of super heroes or just go solo? (Larger Group) (Solo)
3. If a super villain were in peril, would you save him? Yes No
4. Do you have a sidekick to help you out of tight spots? Yes No
5. If the president asked you to cease your super hero activities would you (blatantly continue) (secretly carry on) (act only in emergency) (follow the president's instructions)
6. When dealing with a particularly unruly villain do you (try to reason with him first) (subdue him and reason later) (forget reasoning and subdue him swiftly)
7. Other than yourself, who is your favorite hero? ______________________

HOW TO ADVERTISE IN COMICS TRADER

Each page of the Trader section is divided into 12 units. Each unit space costs $19.00 each. You may buy as many as you like at that price. Simply type your copy onto an 8x10 sheet and send it to us with payment. If you buy multiple spaces, you may measure the total dimensions of the space and prepare your ad in one large unit to fit. We'll reduce it to fill the space. A border for your ad is free. If space allows, we'll typeset a heading, if you specify one.

NO DISCOUNTS. NO CONTRACTS.
NO COLUMN INCHES. NO HASSLES.

Comics Trader runs in every issue of CBG. The deadline is noon each Thursday. Just send your ad with payment to: CBG, Dept. CT, 700 E. State St., Iola, Wis. 54990.

HINTS:

Since ads will be reduced to ⅓ original size, readability in the original copy is crucial. Be sure to allow space between lines of type and use a fresh ribbon and white paper. Cramming the ad with copy works against you, because people won't buy, if they can't read your ad. Try different designs, pictures, or logos to break up the copy and grab the reader's attention.

Marvel Sets ⇨ 20~40% OFF

ANTHONY C. STORZIERI, 1518 6TH AVENUE, NEPTUNE, NJ 07753

Postage on all sets is included. Insurance (optional) is $2.00. 1985 Overstreet Guide values are given in parentheses on most sets. All sets are in near mint to mint condition unless otherwise indicated. Extended list of individual Marvel comics for sale will be included with all orders. If you would just like to receive the list, just send a 22 cents stamp or a large SASE. All comics are individually bagged. For further information or to reserve books call me at 201-775-8355 between 5:00 and 5:30 pm.

HOW TO ADVERTISE IN COMICS TRADER

Each page of the Trader section is divided into 12 units. Each unit space costs $19.00 each. You may buy as many as you like at that price. Simply type your copy onto an 8x10 sheet and send it to us with payment. If you buy multiple spaces, you may measure the total dimensions of the space and prepare your ad in one large unit to fit. We'll reduce it to fill the space. A border for your ad is free. If space allows, we'll typeset a heading, if you specify one.

NO DISCOUNTS. NO CONTRACTS.
NO COLUMN INCHES. NO HASSLES.

Comics Trader runs in every issue of CBG. The deadline is noon each Thursday. Just send your ad with payment to: CBG, Dept. CT, 700 E. State St., Iola, Wis. 54990.

HINTS:

Since ads will be reduced to ⅓ original size, readability in the original copy is crucial. Be sure to allow space between lines of type and use a fresh ribbon and white paper. Cramming the ad with copy works against you, because people won't buy, if they can't read your ad. Try different designs, pictures, or logos to break up the copy and grab the reader's attention.

USUAL MAIL BID RULES

1. Bid by lot, not by piece. Lots are not to be broken unless stated by seller.
2. No buy or unlimited bids accepted. (A buy bid is when a bidder tells an auctioneer to buy the lot for him at reasonable cost over highest bidder.
3. Postage and insurance will be added to invoices.
4. No commission to be charged by seller. The high bid represents the maximum selling price of a lot.
5. Terms: Cash upon receipt of invoice. Invoice to be mailed by seller within 10 days after closing date of the sale.
6. Mail Bid Sales will close 2 weeks from date of publication unless otherwise stated by seller.
7. Seller may require a deposit to be sent with bids as a guarantee that high bidder will honor his bids. It is not returnable if high bidder fails to honor his bids (unless excused by seller) it shall be used as partial payment on successful bids. Any deposit requirement will be clearly stated in the seller's advertisement. Unsuccessful bidders will have their deposits returned within 3 days following the closing date of the sale.
8. Improperly described lots must be postmarked for return within 5 days after receipt. Errors in bidding are the responsibility of the buyer.
9. Exceptions to any of the above rules must be stated in the seller's advertisement.
10. A Mail Bid Sale is not an unrestricted sale unless so stated by the seller. The seller has the right to reject a bid for any reason whatsoever.

Hero Comics to provide comprehensive distribution

When the first issues of the three Hero Comics titles appear on newsstands June 26, there will be at least a few copies in every comic book retail store in the United States, Canada, and Great Britain. A small number of extra copies of Champions, Eternity Smith, and Captain Thunder and Blue Bolt comics will be made available free to every retailer who deals with an independent comic book distributor.

The purpose of providing those extra copies, according to Dennis Mallonee, president of Heroic Publishing Inc., is to demonstrate Hero Comics' commitment to reaching the comic book retail customer.

"In today's bizarre comic book market," Mallonee said, "retail store owners are understandably reluctant to commit themselves sight unseen to new product from a publisher new to the comic book industry. Therefore, it's up to us to demonstrate to our retailers and to our distributors that Hero Comics is willing to make this commitment. It's not enough simply to say that these are good comics. Nobody doubts that; everyone who has seen the books agrees with that. What we have to demonstrate is that they will sell — that people will want to buy them. And we can't do that if the comics aren't out there to be sold."

As of May 15, the projected print run for each of those three first issues stood at a minimum of 30,000 copies. Mallonee said the actual print run was more likely to be in the 35-40,000 range, the number depending on whether final arrangements could be made prior to printing with International Periodical Distributors to handle distribution of Hero Comics to independent book stores and a prominent book store chain.

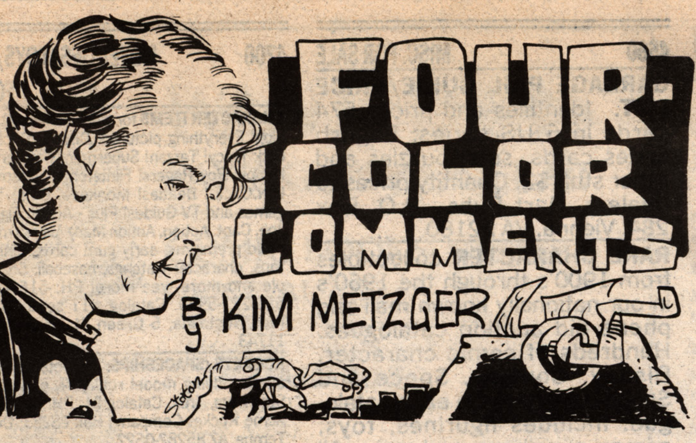
Flashback: 45 years ago

Fairy Tale Parade #1, with art by Walt Kelly, is published by Dell, dated July 1942.

—Greg W. Myers



January 1979 was an active time for super-heroes in the media. Wonder Woman and The Incredible Hulk each had a prime-time television series. Superman the Movie had been in release for a month. Captain America and Mandrake the Magician were featured in TV movies. It was in this atomosphere that NBC aired two specials that qualify as the worst treatments of super-heroes in another medium ever.

The specials aired on consecutive Thursdays, Jan. 18 and 25, at 8 p.m. EST on NBC. The title was Legends of the Super-Heroes, but ads for it substituted Challenge for Legends. They were videotaped shows produced by Hanna-Barbera, apparently an attempt to make a live-action version of the successful Saturday morning cartoon series, SuperFriends. But even that show was never this bad.

The main selling point for Legends was, I suppose, the return of Adam West, Burt Ward, and Frank Gibson to their roles of Batman, Robin, and The Riddler, respectively.

The plot of the first special was the basic battle between good and evil super-groups. Both groups were odd assortments. The good guys, besides Batman and Robin, were The Flash, Green Lantern, Black Canary, The Huntress, Hawkman, and Captain Marvel, who was perhaps picked because Superman was busy in the movies. (Just as well; Superman had been humiliated already by ABC's version of his Broadway musical.) I can recall no "names" outside of West and Ward among the heroes. If there's any justice, none of them became stars after the specials, either.

As for the villains, besides Gorshin, there were Charlie Callas as Sinestro, Howard Morris as Dr. Sivana, and Ruth Buzzi as Aunt Minerva (an evil gang boss who faced Captain Marvel a few times). You also had the Weather Wizard, Mordu, and Solomon Grundy (the only one who looked halfway decent in his "costume" and make-up). In the second special, you also had The Atom and Giganta appearing together in a skit announcing they were to be married. (It mostly consisted of short jokes. They didn't deal with Giganta's evolution from a gorilla.)

Time has mercifully dimmed my memories of these specials, but I'll relate what I can remember. I recall Batman and Robin getting into an argument over driving the Batmobile and letting it run out of gas. You didn't see either Flash or Green Lantern traveling. Flash would pose in a running stance, then disappear, GL used his ring to teleport himself. I can't recall seeing Hawkman or Captain Marvel fly.

The worst part of the first special was the villains' plan to defeat the heroes. They had Sinestro dress as a gypsy woman at a lemonade stand and give each hero a drink (created by Sivana) which took away their powers. Not only did it take away the powers of Captain Marvel, Flash, and Black Canary (her canary cry), it also stole the powers (?) of Green Lantern and the non-powered heroes. That's all I remember of the first one.

The second managed to be worse than the first special. Its subtitle was "The Roast." All the heroes were roasted on a show with Ed McMahon as host. The jokes and barbs were of a quality that made Dean Martin roasts of the time seem the height of wit. There were instantly forgettable musical numbers, an interminable exchange between McMahon and Grundy, with the latter going berserk whenever he heard the word "swamp." And someone did a take-off of Rona Barrett covering the whole mess.

Oh, yes, there was one other character on both shows: Retired Man. He was supposed to have once been the greatest super-hero of all until he bacame too old and was addled after attempting some feat that was beyond him. In short, he was an excuse for the writers to do a lot of ageist material. (I'm not sure, but I think it was revealed that Retired Man's name used to be Red Tornado.)

I have found no reviews of these specials. The New York Times announced one, but it didn't run. (The critic's brain probably shorted out on viewing the shows.) I would imagine a review and cast listing ran in Variety, but I have no access to issues that far back.

The specials were never repeated and no more were ever made. They had been put up against Mork and Mindy, which was then at the peak of its popularity. I don't know what happened to the second show, but the first placed next to last in the magazine ratings for the week. (Only one of NBC's failed news magazine shows fared worse.) I don't think the specials were ever released on videocassette. With luck, they never will be.

HOW TO ADVERTISE. . .

Decide what type of ad you need, CBG has several formats to choose from:

DISPLAY ADVERTISING:

These ads appear throughout COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE. They range in size from full pages to 2 colums by 2 inches and any size in between. Ads that are more columns wide than inches high are not acceptable. Typesetting, photos, artwork, borders and logos are all included in the price of your display ad. Sizes and prices are found on the adjacent rate chart.

COMICS TRADER:

This is an area reserved for the "little guy" who wants no frills advertising with a price to match. $19.00 buys one of the 12 equal spaces on the Comics Trader page. These spaces can be bought in any multiple of the $19.00 unit. We'll reduce the ad and handle all the production — just design your ad on an 8x10" space and send it with payment. Remember to keep your design simple so your ad will be readable when reduced.

COLLECTOR'S SHOWCASE:

A new ad format in COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE which offers you typeset space at a discount. Collector's Showcase units are approximately business card size. You may buy as many units as you want for an ad at a cost of $15.00 per box. All typesetting is done by Krause Publications and is included in the price. We recommend no more than 25-30 words per box.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY:

One column ads, 1-3 inches in length must appear in the classified section. They may be placed under the various classified headings. This gives you the advantage of targeting the collectors you want to reach while standing out among the smaller word ads in classified. Rates are found on the adjacent display rate chart.

CLASSIFIED WORD ADS:

Our "Comics Exchange" is thriving and heavily read. Base rates are 12¢ per word with discounts for multiple issues. Please print and punctuate — we are not responsible for errors due to longhand and illegible copy. See adjacent Comics Exchange chart for rates.

RETAILER DIRECTORY:

A comprehensive listing of comic shops in and around the U.S. $2.00 a week leads buyers to your store by listing you name, address, phone number, and ten words of copy you choose. May be purchased in 26 or 52 week increments only. For more details see Retailer Directory page of this issue.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW:

PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, Mastercard, Mastercard II, Barclay Card, Access Card, Eurocard, Diamond Card, Union Card.

DEADLINE: For all advertising is noon, Wednesday for the issue dated the Friday 22 days later.

FORMAT: COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE uses the column inch format for advertising. Each page contains 80 column inches - 5 columns wide by 16" high. One column is 11 picas (1-13/16 inches) wide.

TYPESETTING, PICTURES, BORDERS, LOGOS are all available free along with custom layout of ads. Contact our advertising department at 715-445-2214 for details.

PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed each week. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

CONTRACTS: Reduced rates are available for contract advertisers. See chart on this page.

ALL ADVERTISING IS SUBJECT TO THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF THE CURRENT COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE RATE CARD, AVAILABLE BY WRITING THE ADDRESS BELOW.

NEW ADVERTISERS

Ask for a full advertising package before you advertise to receive complete information on contracts, discounts, and your other advertising options with CBG. WE MUST HAVE YOUR FULL NAME, STREET ADDRESS, AND PHONE NUMBER BEFORE YOU CAN RUN ADS IN CBG. THIS APPLIES WHETHER YOU USE A P.O. BOX OR COMPANY NAME.

RESTORED COMICS AND MAGAZINES

Accepted standards in the field are that dealers must state the fact when an item has been restored.

COPYRIGHTS

Do not use copyrighted or trademarked characters to decorate ads. You may feature an actual item you are selling in an ad, however, always be sure to label it with the appropriate copyright or trademark credit. This policy is to protect our advertisers from trouble with copyright holders. We shall, if necessary remove unauthorized copyrighted or trademarked characters from ads.

GRADING GUIDE

Theoretically, given a set of grading rules, determining condition of a comic book should be simple. Unfortunately, flaws vary from item to item, and it can be difficult to pin one label on a particular issue. In no way is a CBG reader or advertiser bound to follow this or any other standard, but each is welcome to use this as a service which can clarify terms used in collecting.

Mint This is a perfect comic. Its cover has full luster, with its edges sharp and its pages like new. There are no signs of wear or aging. It is not imperfectly printed nor markedly off-center. "Mint" means just what it says.

Fine This comic book's cover is worn but flat and clean with no defacement. There is no cover writing or tape repair. Stress lines around the staples and more rounded corners are permitted. It is a good-looking issue at first glance.

Good This is a complete but very worn comic book. Creases, minor tears, rolled spine, and cover flaking are permissable — but there is no tape or browned pages. Older Golden Age comics often come in this condition.

Fair This comic book may have a soiled, slightly damaged cover, badly rolled spine, cover flaking, corners gone, tears, and the like. It is an issue with multiple problems but it is intact. Tape may be present.
